

Αυτό το βιβλίο είναι ένα διαδραστικό πειραματικό έργο γύρω απ' τη δημιουργική γραφή και τη γλώσσα αλλά και την συλλογικότητα και την πολλαπλότητα. Είναι μια συλλογή φανταστικών αρχειακών υλικών (σελίδες από ημερολόγια, αλληλογραφία, συνταγές, ανακοινώσεις, μυθοπλασία, συνεντεύξεις κ.ά.) από το μέλλον που κατοπτρίζουν την διαδρομή μιας συλλογικότητας σε ένα νησί τη Μεσογείου. Μέσα από αυτό το μυθοπλαστικό αρχειακό υλικό βλέπουμε προσωπικές και γεωπολιτικές εξελίξεις στην ευρύτερη περιοχή, καθώς και τις γλωσσικές αλλαγές που δημιουργούν τα “μεγγλικά” (μεσογειακά αγγλικά). Στα μεγγλικά, τη γλώσσα του μέλλοντος και των επιμελητών αυτού του αρχειακού υλικού, διαβάζουμε για τις αξίες, τις σκέψεις, και τα συναισθήματά τους για την δική τους εποχή αλλά και για τη δική μας. Η συγγραφέας σας προσκαλεί να διαβάσετε το βιβλίο αλλά και να συνομιλήσετε μαζί της είτε σαν μυθοπλαστικοί χαρακτήρες είτε όχι.

Anna T. Diotima; or, Deir*land
A fragmented story of arkives, kolektivizm, imaginajon, & multitudes

This book is an interactive experimental project about creative writing and language, collectivity and multitudes. It is a collection of fictional archival materials (pages from diaries, correspondence, recipes, announcements, fiction, interviews, etc.) from the future that reflect the journey of a queer feminist collective living on a Mediterranean island. Through this fictional archival material, and their many authors and writing styles, we see personal and geopolitical developments in the wider region, as well as the aesthetic and linguistic changes created by “Medlish” (Mediterranean English). In Medlish--the language of the future and of the curators of this archival material--we read about their values, thoughts, and feelings about their own time and ours. The author invites you to read the book and to converse with her, whether as fictional characters or not.

Topics

a) Inhabitants

- Newcomers from July 1st (feedback, check-in round)

M feels comfortable, D is getting used to the communal living situation and is adjusting nicely, H has a hard time feeling safe at night being so far from the main village and no lights in the road, K is happy to help others next week

- Issues/ Report/ Things to Fix

Transportation to city/port (who could help?)

Water too hot for baby (ask Alicia)

Lee can't be assistant until 30/9/2020, who can replace him? Åsa signs up from tomorrow till 30/9.

- New incoming

Number of newcomers to arrive on October 1st (number of applications 22, (27 applicants)) Newcomer's group met on September 20, 2020 (first week assistants? Lisa, Georgia, Sofía)

b) Budget*

Spent on utilities (municipal water, town water, electricity, internet) = 4,200 (up 400 from previous quarter)

Spent on food supplies = 5,732 (down 27 from previous month)

Spent on gardening supplies (11 bags Compo Complestal Supra 5kg compost, 30m hose) = 196,90 (down 9 from previous month)

Spent on animal care (2 bags dry for ster. 75,80, 1 bag pr. Gastro 14,80, 40 nutri 36) = 126,60 (up 62,2 from previous month)

Spent on gas/transportation costs (gas for cars and motorbikes 363,90, new arrivals' bus tickets 60, new arrivals' ferry tickets 32 x 17 = 544, ferry tickets with local card 17,81 x 8 = 142,48) = 1,110.38 (up 306 from previous month)

Crowdfunding

We will need at least 2,000 for next month's new arrivals

Marija says she can help with the video and help Åsa have it uploaded by 5/10/2020 (send out email* to ask for more helping hands and those that want to be interviewed this time)

Laleh will send out emails to regular donors and new patreons***.

Needs / Ideas / Suggestions

A would like us to have an info stand with our story and mission statement in the entrance for beach-goers and hikers to get to know us, join, or support us.

L says that might bring some more visibility and rub-ins with hostile locals

Paint needed to paint school before winter (get quotes for costs: Dina)

Other issues

The working group for gender neutral and accessible public toilets by the beach in F. and the port in E. says they will need first draft prints done in the next few days. Cost: approx 50.

Dear collective,

Ние сме двама хомосексуални* мъже от Варна (България) и мислихме да ви пишем от дълго време. Бихме искали да се включим в колектива. Ние сме Атанас на 23 и Христофор на 48. И двамата сме били в анархистката сцена и имаме опит с communal living и колективни процеси. Атанас работи в ИТ, а Христофор е безработен* с образование за електротехник. Двамата мислим, че животът ни би бил по-хубав, ако станем част от вашия колектив. Ние можем да помагаме с много неща - с компютърни и технически проблеми, готвене и също така можем да ви учим български и руски. Нямаме средствата, за да дойдем на среща, но с удоволствие бихме направили една онлайн среща/интервю. Ако мине добре и има желание от двете страни, ще съберем достатъчно пари и ще се нанесем в колектива. Ако имате някакви въпроси, не се притеснявайте да питате. Очакваме с нетърпение вашия отговор!

Атанас и Христофор.

The beginning of the pandemic* brought in an inflow of emails and several new residents.

The project ran for several years on a small scale but the flight towards nature<sup>i</sup>, small communities, and the prospect of self-sustainability brought it to peoples' attention in the second half of 2020. I still remember the shift in our workload*, the social media tags* and DMs*, and the many many conversations that followed. Our younger residents don't know a world where these projects were not the norm. Of course ours was premised on queer*, feminist, egalitarian, anti-racist, anti-speciesist ideas. Not every other was, or is, like that.

I decided to write this account of my experiences in the community to reflect in particular about the changes that took place in the early PostCo* years.

I, myself, joined the collective in 2015 after having visited some of their events with local friends while vacationing in the island the years prior. I was living in London* at the time and was getting frustrated with the busy lifestyle and the size of the city and, to be honest, I was very unhappy with my job. I worked at a bank* in Islington at the time. I was thinking of moving to a sunnier place for at least part of the year. I had befriended some Brits* on the island who told me about the collective and while I wasn't certain this was for me I secretly entertained the idea of joining on a trial basis. That must have been 2012 or '13. As a queer person of colour* growing up in London I was aware of racism* and i. Bak in Δe 21st senturi it was stil kustomari 4 human ppl 2 liv "awai from natur" & suround Δemselvs wiθ human-mad strukfurs Δat exkluded, kontrold, or limited naturs fetšurs. homophobia* but was never very active in the activist scene, so when I first thought of asking to join the collective I was a bit afraid that they would look at my rather short CV in those areas and reject me. Luckily they didn't. We had a casual chat over dinner in late summer of 2015 and after two months I moved in. I sublet* my apartment to a friend of a friend just to still have it in case things didn't work out.

When I first started living here we were only about 40 people, some of whom lived here part-time. The farm and the stables* didn't exist then, we only had a fenced-off lot with two rescued* goats. We got the project going in 2016 and I was happy to help with something so hands-on. It was exactly the change I had been craving for. I worked as an English teacher over this first winter in a small language school in the city centre. I was surprised by the lack of public transport<sup>ii</sup> and the lack of bikes (the latter was explained by the hilly terrain). The owner and fellow teacher was very sweet and supportive. The children were very curious about me but also prone to be mischievous due to my not understanding them, but over time they spoke more and more English and we got along just fine. By the end of my first year I felt like I had become part of the community: both Diotima's and to a lesser extent the local community of Brits. Diotima taught me a lot very patiently, though I also had to be extremely patient as I had to also explain things. We did have some tensions over how differently we understood expressions of racism, microaggressions*, and queerphobia* and how we each preferred to deal with them in public. A lot of our work at the time was about unlearning unearned convictions.

Like the extrovert* I am, I soon took up the role of forming the "welcoming committee" for newcomers, something I still enjoy participating in. It has been great drawing on my own experience to inform people who are just joining about practical matters as well as encourage the more reserved to join interest groups in order to acclimate and get comfy. I did feel like a counsellor during fresher's week*, which was fun.

I was also doing some translation work on the side, mainly essays and articles for online platforms and news sites. Åsa helped me make a website* for my translation services and work started gradually picking up. I then quit the language school and switched exclusively to translation work. This meant I didn't have to go to the city daily and in the winter I barely went at all, which, combined with the fact that I was starting to miss going out on proper dates, made me feel somewhat isolated. That's when Bridget joined the collective and we hit it off right from the start. She was just so delightful and fun to be around and easy to talk to. Soon we were a couple and I felt at home. Showing her around was also a nice way for me to go out more and appreciate the beauty of the island once again.

In the years that followed we would receive DMs and Emails from time to time (especially during the end of the winter) and we would collectively discuss each person and have them over for a conversation (usually over dinner) or over Skype* or Viber* if they couldn't be here in person. The latter was always a struggle as we prefer the more unstructured and organic way of a dinner to get to know someone and for them to get to know us and see first hand how the place functions. We would often get very different impressions when the meeting was exclusively online and went back and forth on our decision to offer this as a way to get to know a person.

There were of course situations where a meeting was unnecessary and would have been indeed unthinkable such as the case of (mostly Syrian & Somali) people fleeing wars reaching our shores through perilous crossings. We began a crowd-funding campaign* to get two caravans as it was urgent to host three individuals (two of them underage) immediately and we hoped to then be able to raise the funds to build a few more lodgings. The campaign for the used caravans was successful thanks to friends and contacts from all over who shared it and backed it. The money for building though was much more difficult to gather, even with the lower costs thanks to the collective doing some of the labour.

The next three years went on without major changes, I was still happily seeing Bridget, doing translation work and helping out here and there in hands-on tasks. My mom came for a visit in 2019. She said she could imagine retiring in such a ‘commune’! As if!

Then 2020 came round and things started changing drastically. In late February the country saw its first Covid-19* cases and by early March it went into a lockdown. This didn’t affect those of us working from home or in the community so much but it was disastrous for those who worked in the service industry or had small businesses. For instance, Ioanna’s jewellery store had to close for more than two months; Ersi wasn’t allowed to make the at-home visits to the elderly so she too was unemployed; Lena’s hair salon closed; Sophia was asked to only clean the bank branch once a week after the employees were off. Dina was an essential worker* (working for the power company) and had to continue going to work; and Lisa and Georgia continued working on the bikes and their sales slightly went up as people were trying to find physically distant ways to commute and exercise. The government offered meagre benefits for those financially impacted that helped only a little and the campaigns for more lodgings and caravans were put on hold as the whole world froze and giving money to charity when you don’t know if/when your next paycheck would be coming in was of course too risky for many.

During this time we turned to the garden project and the shelter* for comfort, to take our minds off of things and to feel connected and active, though we were all somewhat numb. We added two more caravans, to a total of five. Summer came and most went back to work, some hoping tourism* would cover some of the damages. It soon became clear that travel restrictions, financial concerns, and people’s fear over covid wouldn’t allow us to go back to normal any time soon. It was a strenuous year that brought a depressive mood in the group and put on hold several potential new members.

Hej mamma,

Hur mår du? Jag hoppas du inte är för stressad med Agnes försumlighet och att hon så småningom kommer runt och vänjer sig vid att ha på sig en mask.

Har du plockat bär? Hur mår Sharky?

Vi mår bra. Nästa vecka kommer vi ha några nykomlingar och sen kommer det vara två veckor karantän* igen. Den här gången kommer cirka 9 nya personer att gå med, varav 4 i det stora tältet, 2 kommer att förankra sin båt till havs, och resten kommer med sin egen husvagn. Vi samlar fortfarande in pengar för de andra två husvagnarna, så om du inte har redan gjort det, kom ihåg att mejla dina vänner, särskilt Alexander och moster Greta. Jag hoppas det går smidigt. Det gör det vanligtvis.

Jag är fortfarande irriterad på Ntina eftersom hon fortfarande tilltalar Gusten och Andreas som om hon är säker på att de kommer att vara pojkar. Jag blir för utmattad av att förklara och begära samma sak om och om igen så nu försöker jag aktivt undvika henne. Barnen verkar inte vara så besvärade så kanske jag borde följa deras exempel? Kanske skulle jag bara vara nöjd med att alla andra är onboard i vårt lilla samhälle och uppskatta det faktum att utanför det skulle det vara en ständig kamp.

Hur som helst, låt mig veta när din kamera är igång igen och vi kan höras via Skype nån eftermiddag som passar dig.

Kram,
B.

They called us Zoomers* before.

Now I feel like we have finally owned it.

We see each other only online.

We check the news every morning and every evening. And in between.

Numbers and graphs and press conferences.

That will tell us when we can meet again.

I feel like you've become a migrant again.

I naively thought we were migrants already.

But this has put another migration and separation on us.

My head is no longer spinning.

I'm grounded.

Σήμερα κάναμε εργαστήριο ξύλου μετά το μάθημα. Η Enar μας έδειξε πως να χρησιμοποιούμε την πλάνη και τα καρφιά και τις βίδες που είναι για ξύλα. Είμασταν μαζεμένες όλες γύρω-γύρω και παραπάτησα και για να κρατηθώ έπιασα την ροδέλα που κόβει και κόπηκα. Όταν κόπηκα (που δεν κόπηκα δηλαδή, γδάρσιμο ήταν) η Casho το είδε και με βοήθησε να το πλύνω και να του βάλω τραυμαπλάστ. Δεν πονάω. Πρέπει πάντα να προσέχουμε εκεί μέσα γιατί έχει πολλά κοφτερά και μυτερά εργαλεία και πράγματα. Η Enar μας είπε για τον θείο της στην Rejë που της έδειξε πως να φτιάξει ένα σπιτάκι για πουλιά. Είπε πως όταν μάθουμε να χρησιμοποιούμε καλά τα σφυριά και τις πλάνες θα κάνουμε πριόνια και μετά θα ξέρουμε πως να κάνουμε σπιτάκι για πουλιά ή για μέλισσες (είναι σχεδόν το ίδιο). Αύριο έχουμε πάλι εργαστήριο ξύλου και μετά θα κάνουμε κέντημα με την Ιωάννα, αλλά εγώ θέλω να κάνουμε χάντρες. Την άλλη βδομάδα είπαν θα κάνουμε κουρέματα με τη Λένα. Πλάκα θα 'χει.

Άντε γειά τώρα.

Workshop announcement

External person: Yui Wang

Coordinator: Ersi

Workshop: Vulnerability and Fierceness with Yui Wang

17 & 18/10/2020 12:00-17:00

Donation-based (all proceeds go to the workshop leader).

Registration mandatory (B0dyW0rk@hotmail.com), limited number of spots, all bodies, ages, and abilities welcome. Workshop will be conducted in English. Whisper translations in other languages possible, please contact us to arrange.<sup>i</sup>

Join us for a two-day workshop (5h each day) where we explore the fierceness of vulnerability and the vulnerability of fierceness. Let's use our bodies to find our power and empower others in our communities and learn how to open up, trust, and form alliances.

With elements from yoga, meditation, self-defense and dance Yui Wang offers a unique experience to experiment and play with feelings and the bodies that carry them.

Help the pyroaffected animals of the fire in K - urgent!

The devastating impact of the fire (suspected arson!) has been felt by flora and fauna in a radius of more than 20km. The recent fires in the area of K. have left many non-human animals (pets, strays/feral, wild) without a home and with serious injuries. We need homes for them until they can be either released back into the wild or find permanent homes through the shelter. Our volunteers are in direct contact with the fire department and know which areas are safe for them to be in. Please do not attempt to enter the zone the fire department has demarcated, as the fire is not yet fully under control. If you want to help (care for an injured animal, donate money or supplies) get in contact with us.

We would like to ask anyone who could spare medical supplies (clean cloth, bandages, gauzes, single use latex/nitrile gloves, carprofen, meloxicam, antibiotics) food, and food and water bowls to please bring them to our collection point at the O. boardwalk. A car with our logo will be there daily from 1pm till 6pm.

Hola!

Qué tal?

Llegamos bien ayer y hemos estado conociendo a todos y participando en el pleno, etc. Todos usamos máscaras* y las usaremos hasta que pasen al menos 14 días. Después podemos deshacernos de ellas durante al menos dos semanas hasta que vendrán las nuevas personas. Todas las personas que hemos conocido parecen estar bastante tranquilas con esta locura*. Hay mucha más gente por conocer pero parecen ser los más independientes/introvertidos. Elena y yo estamos haciendo un esfuerzo por estar mucho allí y aprender el terreno, así que no hemos pasado tanto tiempo a bordo. He hablado con las personas que están responsables del jardín esta temporada y empezaré a ayudarlas pronto. No sé cómo voy a trabajar en estas temperaturas con la máscara puesta!

Cómo están? Siguen con el maratón televisivo? Alguna receta nueva estos días?

Los quiero,

Elena (y Mariana)

Hey my darling,

How have you been since we last facetimed*?

We've been working a lot spending most days at the studio. I think we will have all 24 works finished by opening day which is comforting. I simply don't have the time and headspace for any admin/promo stuff right now and I miss talking to you. It's been nice working here though I miss the color of our waters. This week I had another encounter with some rude local teens which I will *not* miss 🤔👤😂

Hugs my darling,

For this month Sava and I want to propose a new word for us:

Diaspiring = to go back to where you're from—not for family, nor work, nor simple vacation like a tourist but to connect with and be where you feel you need to be. To feel the smell of the air. Taste the foods. Be exposed to the light. It's a need. Which may additionally have elements of helping your elderly parents with tasks they can't safely do anymore and reserve them for when you're there, or help friends pick fruits and crops, or volunteer to clean up coastlines, or vote. We would like to see the concept catch on and have workplaces offer time off for it to migrants. It can be pronounced “daiæspi'riŋ” or “daiæspa'i'riŋ” to allude to aspiration. We'll share the sign from up close.

Not to be conflated with Diasporise = to germinate, to disseminate, to emigrate and be part of the diaspora.

What do you think?

“Queerfeminist Veils: Headscarf and islamophobia in secular spaces through the comparison of two projects”

MA Thesis for the degree Master’s in Gender and Space

By Malvina Dilaver (she/her/hers), Faculty of Art, Design and Architecture, Ege University

Supervisor

Dr. Lamia Erdemir (she/her/hers), Faculty of Art, Design and Architecture, Ege University

Abstract

This qualitative research project presents two case studies of two different self-identifying “queerfeminist projects” in Southern Europe: Diotima and Nosotros. Based in different countries, with a different history and life-span, the two were chosen as they carry the same political labels and share similar mission statements. They are both in Muslim-minority countries,<sup>i</sup> with different demographics in terms of age, religious backgrounds, ethnicities, and occupations. Nosotros began as a squat living project and social space in an urban center and later transformed into a community project at the edge of the city recently hosting refugees, while Diotima has always been by the sea in the outskirts of a small settlement on an island inhabited by both locals and foreigners. Their similar profiles and membership numbers offer an ideal setting for comparisons. As is the case in many queerfeminist spaces, more people identify as atheists, or

i. In the 21st century approx 80% of human population were religious/faiθful & often countries/states had an official religion (often supported/subsidized by the state) leaving all other religions & faiths in a disadvantaged position. Even before the Ottoman theocracy Ottoman states & persons were islamophobic even when they were not christian. Indeed we understand islamophobia, antisemitism, and other biases often in a broader context.

non-religious and are more prone to be secular and in support of the separation of church and state than their non-queerfeminist counterparts. This thesis explores tendencies within the collectives through the experiences of the interviewees and the way they experience membership in those communities and public space as is shaped by them. The research was conducted over a period of six months in late 2019 with three hijab-wearing persons from Nosotros and four from Diotima, carried out through interviews, both in-person and over video conferencing.

Updated rules of conduct

Dear all,

As promised I incorporated the suggestions from our last meeting in the amendments of the new document (only including the three topics we discussed) and I am sending it to you with some of my own thoughts and additions for review. I don't agree with many of those myself as I find them very restrictive (some even curtailing freedom of speech if applied to the extreme) but that has been the consensus so I guess we will proceed for now. I have to again express the opinion of several of us that strict "codes of conduct" might be from outside our community and making us into something we're not (Anglo, bourzouades etc). Nothing personal, just my opinion. If the nature of this community is changing that may signal to some of us that we don't belong here, especially if we joined to be free from strict societal norms.

Let me know what you think.

Warmly,

Tatjana

Meaningful Inclusion (Learn, Read, Speak out)

Our community (much like the world) is made up of people of all types of genders and expressions, sexualities and sexual orientations, dis_abilities, physical appearances, ethnic, national, or regional origins, religions, body size, accents, races, relationship statuses, classes, educational types, and ages. We prefer that everyone uses inclusive language (whichever variant is appropriate in each language or dialect) and does not make assumptions about others.

We regularly hold workshops and discussions to help each other learn and understand these differences better. If you feel unprepared despite having tried to educate yourself with the resources available to you and would like such a workshop to have a particular topic, please use the form to anonymously call for one. There are resources in the school's library that address all of these topics if you would like to study independently.

If you see or hear someone using language that is not inclusive, that is discriminatory, derogatory, sexist, queerphobic, transphobic*, biphobic, lesbophobic, homophobic, Islamophobic, racist, classist, ageist, ableist, anti-Romani, and you can speak out immediately please consider doing so. You can use the format of: a) identify the problem (eg "you said the g word and this is offensive"), and b) offer a recourse (eg "please don't do that anymore"), if you want you can c) offer a resource (eg "in the library there are books on Roma history and the history of the term in K. that could help you understand the impact this word has"). If the word was addressed to one of the people present you can ask them if they would like to talk in private and respect their wish either way.

If for whatever reason you can't at that moment, please report it to at least one other person (including date, time, place, the names of other witnesses, and the name of the person who behaved/acted/spoke in the way you considered discriminatory). It is important that this be addressed and the people present have a place to discuss their feelings of uneasiness, hurt, fear, anger. We are a community focused on democracy; as such, violence masquerading as free speech is not welcome.<sup>i</sup>

Transparency & Accountability

In order to build and rebuild trust amongst all members and visitors we are committed to a policy of transparency towards the members, visitors, guests, funders, supporters, and institutions we collaborate with. Our financial plan for the coming year and our expenses, income from campaigns, and backers from the previous year will be available on our website annually in January.

Please talk to the financial team or someone else you trust if you are struggling, if you have urgent expenses, if you need support, and please tell us if you have made a mistake so we can discuss and correct it.

Social Media Posts & Recording

Zaproszenie na protest i dyskusję
30 Października 2020, godzina 16

Po tym jak amerykański ruch #metoo* i jego najróżniejsze odmiany na całym świecie nabrały rozpędu, seksizm stał się o temacie wiele bardziej obecnym w mainstreamowych mediach.

Ale nie w Polsce. Polski rząd bez przerwy forsuje restrykcyjne i krzywdzące ustawy tym razem faktycznie zakazując aborcji, po to by kontrolować kobiety i karać je za ich sprawczość, życie seksualne i poszukiwanie przyjemności. Zapraszamy na dyskusję 30.10 przed Ambasadą Polski w Wiedniu przy Hietzinger Hauptstrasse 42C.

Poprzez Zoom dołączy do nas Katarzyna ze Rady Konsultacyjnej Strajku Kobiet, członkini Artists for Change Laetitia O oraz Miunic M. z Rosa Lila Villa. Dyskusję poprowadzi Pêdra Böhm z Radia Orange 94.0. Dyskusja będzie na żywo transmitowana przez stację. Zaczniemy o 16 a następnie pogramy trochę muzyki i wspólnie wykrzyczymy protestacyjne slogany. Dołączcie do nas, nawet jeśli spóźnicie się na samą dyskusję. Nigdy nie będziesz szła sama! Nasze ciała, nasza sprawa!

Call to protest and discussion
October 30, 2020 16h

After the US American take-off of the #metoo movement* and its various iterations worldwide, the topic of sexism has been more prominent than ever in mainstream media. But not so much in Poland. This time the government is pushing for an even harsher legislation (essentially making access to safe and legal abortion impossible) to punish women and people with wombs, and limit their agency over their sexuality, their body, and their pursuit of pleasure.

We invite you to join us in a discussion on October 30, 2020 outside of the Polish embassy in Vienna at Hietzinger Hauptstraße 42C, 1130.

We will be joined via Zoom by Katarzyna from Strajk Kobiet's Consultative Council, Artists for Change member Laetitia O., and Rosa Lila Villa's Mounir M. The discussion will be facilitated by Pêdra Böhm from ORANGE 94.0. The discussion will be broadcast live by the station. We will start at 16h, afterwards we will play music and chant slogans, so join us even if you are late for the discussion itself.

We are together! Our Bodies Our Choice!

Μετά την έλευση του κινήματος #MeToo* στις ΗΠΑ και την εξάπλωσή του παγκοσμίως το θέμα του μισογυνισμού είναι στην επικαιρότητα και στα κυρίαρχα Μέσα περισσότερο από ποτέ. Στην Πολωνία η έκταση του θέματος στα κυρίαρχα Μέσα δεν είναι ακόμη τόσο μεγάλη. Αυτή τη φορά η Κυβέρνηση προσπαθεί να περάσει ακόμη πιο τιμωρητική νομοθεσία (συγκεκριμένα επιχειρεί να κάνει την πρόσβαση στην ασφαλή και νόμιμη άμβλωση αδύνατη) για να αφαιρέσει από τις γυναίκες και τα άτομα με μήτρα το δικαίωμα στην αυτοδιάθεση, το δικαίωμα πάνω στα σώματά τους, τη σεξουαλικότητά τους και την αναζήτηση της ευχαρίστησης. Σας καλούμε όλες, όλα, και όλους στη ζωντανή συνομιλία στις 30 Οκτωβρίου, 2020 μπροστά από την Πρεσβεία της Πολωνίας στη Βιέννη (διευθυνση Hietzinger Hauptstraße 42C, 1130).

Leute,

Please see link below

We have to make a contingency plan in case the situation escalates further.

I propose we meet before our next Plenum (maybe early next week?)

L.

Hi everyone,

I agree with Laleh, it would be smart to have a plan especially for those of us of Turkish/Northern Cypriot passports.

Next week could work, though I know Ale and Alicia are having volunteers over on Thursday and they are using the multipur space for some hours.

Hi,

I don't think it's going to be any worse than now and personally I'm pressed for time, but if it makes you feel better than we should do it. I just don't want people to panic without reason.

I.

Laleh, Ekrem, Koralia, Yiannis, and I think it's best to be prepared. It's better for everyone to be able to feel safe here. But we talked a bit and we agree with Ioanna that it's not going to get very bad.

Mediating History: Art and Aquatic Experiences

Friday August 21st, 2020 Exhibition Opening

Exhibition duration: 21/8/2020-4/9/2020

Opening Hours: Tue-Sat 12:00-22:00 and on appointment

We are happy to invite you to the exhibition of Fa'asapa Leota and Laloifi Asoau the two artists who completed this year's extended residency organised by The MoAVetar Gallery and the Diotima collective with the support of the Ministry of Culture and Arts and the Municipality of P.

Leota presents a collection of paintings that deal with topics such as environmental disaster and its impact on personal agency and the relation between human and non-human animals while Asoau invites us to a multisensorial journey to moments in time (both in the past and the future) we can learn from.

Fa'asapa Leota was born in Upolu and has worked as a painter and educator in the capital Apia since 2000. Laloifi Asoau was born in Upolu and studied in Toi Rauwhārangī Massey College of Creative Arts in Aotearoa New Zealand before returning to her homeland and working as an independent artist and multimedia animator in 2012.

The artists will be present and a brief Q&A will take place with all measures for the health and safety of guests observed. All attendees are required to wear masks and keep a minimum distance of 1,5 meters. Disinfectant* will be available at the space and the number of participants will be limited inside the space. Our organisers will be there to support and inform you.

The MoAVetar Gallery and the Diotima collective offer four six-month long residencies annually to connect the practices of contemporary artists living and working on islands around the world. An open call is issued once a year and artists from all backgrounds, ages, and disciplines are invited to apply with a letter of motivation and a portfolio. The selected artists are offered a free working space in The Mo/Vetar Gallery in the city center and free accommodation in a studio apartment in Diotima.

Dealing with Familial and Community-induced Trauma Workshop

In this workshop, we will discuss how familial and/or community trauma may have affected us and the long-lasting impact it has on our lives. Some of the things we could discuss include: psychological torment, intimidation, rejection or invalidation of feelings and fears, bullying in order to comply with community or familial norms, racism, cisheteropatriarchy, speciesism, and other forms of violence. Some of their long-lasting effects may include anxiety, poor sleep, chronic pain, self-blame, self-harm, malnutrition, and addiction.

Our resources are therapeutic, cultural, and artistic. This is not a medical advice workshop, rather it is a space for an open discussion and sharing of coping strategies, creative outlets, and establishing long-term support structures individually and communally.

Evgenia Kuneva is a therapist (CBT*) based in Varna (BG) focusing on familial trauma, poverty, and domestic violence.

Agatha Smith-Wallace is a body worker based in Johannesburg (ZA). She is inspired by Bessel van der Kolk's work on the impact of trauma in the physical body.

Taliba Salah is a mixed media artist from Egypt, and a member of Diotima since 2017. She teaches arts and crafts, loves the work of Alison Bechdel, Keith Haring, and Howard Cruse, and her zines and comics often deal with mental health issues.

To register please email us at: _____

(Bu metne nasıl başlayacağımı bilmiyorum, sen en iyi olduğunu düşündüğün şeyi yaz)

All foods and clothes available for consumption and use in the settlement are vegan***.

Medicines that people require are often unfortunately tested on animals. It is not a perfect system but we understand that operating in a completely different system than the rest of the world will be at times difficult and will require sacrifices.

We recycle everything that is recyclable and try to use reusable materials like glass for as many uses as possible.

We still use petrol-based products (e.g. our snorkelling equipment are made of recycled and virgin plastic, our caravans have synthetic rubber surfaces, some of the food we need and can't grow ourselves comes in plastic packaging).

We repair, donate, and exchange most things and only purchase things when we need them and can't make them or grow them ourselves.

We sterilise the non-human animals with whom we share the space and have our own TNR programme* for homeless cats and dogs. This is a big problem in P. especially with cats who give birth each season, with very little care, effectively depleting themselves from nutrients and having sickly kittens who often don't survive the winter. We regret that we intervene in their reproductive cycle and their bodies, but not doing so, as the situation stands, would feel more unethical to us and we couldn't leave so many cats and kittens suffering. We hope that through our educational programmes the mentality will eventually change and responsible humans will properly take care of, and cohabit with, cats and dogs and their numbers will be sustainable.

Sentience over sapience!

Dear all,

Bura, Hannus and Gusten have asked me to contact you all. They would like to ask us all to bring a text of any kind to be part of our time capsule at the end of the year school celebration on Friday December 18th.

It can be any type of text no matter how formal or informal in whichever language, digital or handwritten, anonymous or signed, as long as it captures something you feel might be interesting for us in a decade. Something about your current state, the collective, a struggle, a wish, a prediction about the future, something silly or funny, a poem you wrote or a school assignment, something you wrote with others or something you wrote by yourself. This year has been unique for us all and we want to be able to look back on it together and explore the feelings that will prompt.

We will bury the capsule together by the bonfire.

Excitedly,

Bura, Hannus, Gusten, Åsa

Αξιότιμε κύριε Ματαράσο, αξιότιμη κυρία Βαρτανιάν, αξιότιμη κυρία Δημητρά,

Επικοινωνώ μαζί σας ως εκπρόσωπος της κοινότητας «Διοτίμα» που βρίσκεται στην περιοχή Π. κοντά στην παραλία Κ. για το θέμα της παραλίας. Είναι σημαντικό για μας να διατηρηθεί η παραλία στην τωρινή της μορφή και να προστατευτεί από παράνομες και παράτυπες εκμεταλλεύσεις τουριστικής φύσης, καθώς επίσης και να παραμείνει ο χαρακτήρας της ως μιας παραλίας που άτομα που κάνουν γυμνισμό* νιώθουν ασφαλή.

Όπως σας είχαμε επισημάνει σε προηγούμενη αλληλογραφία η επιχείρηση της καντίνας* λειτουργεί σε δημόσιο χώρο χωρίς τα απαραίτητα έγγραφα, παίζει δυνατά μουσική ακόμη και σε ώρες κοινής ησυχίας, και έχει αλλάξει δραστικά το τοπίο τοποθετώντας τραπεζοκαθίσματα και ξαπλώστρες σε μεγάλο μήκος της παραλίας. Τις βραδινές ώρες ακόμη και μετά το κλείσιμο παραμένει αναμμένος ένας δυνατός προβολέας στην οροφή της καντίνας με προσανατολισμό τη θάλασσα. Όπως ξέρετε η παραλία χρησιμοποιείται περιοδικά από θαλάσσιες χελώνες καρέττα-καρέττα οι οποίες βγαίνουν στην ξηρά για να γεννήσουν τα αυγά τους. Όταν οι νεογνοί εκολαυθούν κατευθύνονται προς το δυνατότερο φως που στη φύση είναι ο αντικατοπτρισμός του φεγγαριού στη θάλασσα. Ένα τέτοιο δυνατό φως προς την αντίθετη κατεύθυνση είναι πιθανώς καταστροφικός και περιβαλλοντικά εγκληματικός.

Σας παρακαλούμε σαν κοινότητα, σαν πολίτες του νησιού, σαν κάτοικοι με οικολογική συνείδηση να πραγματοποιήσετε επιτόπια έρευνα για το αν το κατάστημα έχει τα απαραίτητα δικαιολογητικά λειτουργίας, αν έχει άδεια για μεγαφωνική μουσική, αν η έκταση που χρησιμοποιεί είναι η προβλεπόμενη από τον νόμο, αν η χρήση του προβολέα είναι απαραίτητη και ποιός ο λόγος της ύπαρξής του.

Προσβλέπουμε σε μια φιλική συνεργασία και σε σύντομη ενημέρωση από εσάς και τις υπηρεσίες σας για τα παραπάνω θέματα. Είμαστε στη διάθεσή σας για κάθε βοήθεια ή διευκρίνιση.

What I imagine the future to be like in 100 ġears when we open the time capsule

In one hundred ġears we will have only good weather all the time and we will be able to swim every day but there will be no fires. We will all have the same amount of toys. We will be able to talk with the fish and the dogs and the cats. Things will not be so expensive but we will also not let things go bad and spoil. Children won't laugh at others and everyone will be more friendly and like kind and nice and grown ups too. Everyone will have a home that no one else can chase them out of.

The town is not going to have it but I think we should consider it since other communities are likely to react the same way and the institution might be delayed for years. Not that it should matter, but because it surely does, they have been convicted of non-violent crimes and they need a transitional space and a community who supports them. Shall we discuss it this Friday?

And there we were, driving the blue Cinquecento up the steep road to the house. Three or four kittens were in the middle of crossing it. She said it would be too difficult for her to back down the steep road and that we had to run them over. I was shocked, sad, infuriated. I was shaking and yelled at the kittens to get off the road. They stood there frozen in fear. Suddenly she appeared. I only saw her shadow at first. It covered the car and most of the road. Her giant hand ushered the kittens back to the meadow. She then looked at my mother and her eyes πέταξαν φλόγες. She looked at me lovingly and without speaking asked me to get out of the car. I stepped aside on the meadow where the kittens ran to safety. She then lifted the car with her left hand, looked at her angrily in the eye and threw the car down towards the hill by the main road. Far beyond where the peafowl used to live. If they were still there they would have been terrified seeing a car flinged above them and crash beyond their garden. They would make their funny noises and upon hearing the crash would probably go silent for a while. She turned and looked at me. I felt her love. I felt safe.

I finally came round to listening to the discussions with my father I recorded last summer. It was his idea, after grandma's and Nikos' deaths due to covid. I have synthesised the following which I thought you, and maybe your class, would find interesting. He is mostly referring to his childhood and how "times were difficult and people were very poor then" discussing his parents' work and everyday life, the occasional treat they could rarely afford (half a croissant for him and his sister, a beer for grandpa on some Saturdays, a bus ticket for his mom and the two kids to the beach on a summer Sunday). Some of it is along the lines of his mother's complaints about the people to whom they loaned what little money they had to only to never see it again (which grandpa always shushed her about). Not the newly released, of course. Memories from the neighbourhood, majority refugees from Asia Minor (completely changed by now, partly gentrified), the few cars driving around in the dirt road, the banana seller (for whom the neighbourhood collected money to custom-build a bike as he was disabled after the many arrests and torture), the stray dogs they harassed, the stuff he found in the trash and attempted to repair. I can now see from whom I take after! Would you like me to make an edit for you? I could also find some old pics online and send them to you along with the ones I took last time. Would that make sense for your migration and fleeing seminar?

Dears, I contacted C. again and the admin told me they currently need a winter-clothes run themselves. Do we proceed as last year with so.me. events?

Message by Ivana, 4/10/2020 10:26

We could also organise a raffle like Cintia was talking about. But for that we will need more hands.

Message by Dunja, 4/10/2020 10:47

Sorry, just saw it. Let's start with a call on all socials and encrypts and give it a week, no?

Message by Ivana, 4/10/2020 10:50

That's good. Let's start like last year, and see how it goes. @Ranim you want me to set up fb etc?

Message by Ranim, 4/10/2020 12:03

Yes Ivana, that would be great. I will promote as much as possible. Will you be able to translate in GR too?

Message by Ivana, 4/10/2020 13:18

I can do EN and GR and post in the 3 socials by the day after tomorrow.

Message by Dunja, 5/10/2020 09:23

Perfect, thanks Ivana. Do you want me to send you last year's text?

Message by Ivana, 5/10/2020 09:30

Yes please, fwd all we have, and maybe ask someone who was involved last year to tell us where we got the biggest response to focus there.

In the summer I went to the beach. I went everyday. Novak sometimes came but he never swims. But we talk and laugh and ~~take~~ collect plastic rubbish* and sometimes he makes me bracelets.

The grown ups of my family sometimes join Novak and me in the beach. Then we can use the kayak and paddle from one side to the other.

After the beach we go home and shower in the garden. We made a hanger for our towels<sup>i</sup> there. Then Max and Stefano prepare lunch and sometimes Novak comes too. Novak also cooks very well. Then I go to the hammock by the xylina at the back of our house and I read. I like Laura Ingalls books a lot. I read 2 last summer. ~~All~~ Both in English. This summer again. While the adults of my family are having siesta I sometimes go to the cats, but only if it's not too hot. Other times I wait until it's time for their dinner. Then I give them each a plate. They are funny all with their tails up and meowing! This summer we had many kittens we collected from the dumpster<sup>ii</sup> in the corner where the road goes. Rasha made me responsible of the kittens. He said he trusts me a lot. But now they are grown ups and they are with the other cats in the big house.

Dear all,

Here's my thoughts about the workshop which concluded this Sunday with success I feel. We had around 16 people each day (14 on Friday, 17 on Saturday, 17 on Sunday) and almost everyone was engaged, especially when breaking into smaller groups. It was really nice to see the younger participants be so vocal about their needs and preferences. Overall I think we had a good balance of different ages and interests, insiders and outsiders which created some new connections. L. and R.N were clear in their plan and tasks and never pressured anyone to step out of their comfort zone. Thank you for putting together this workshop, I felt heard and safe and learned things but most importantly I felt I had the space to express questions and issues that occupy my head on the topic (I didn't expect the leaders to "solve" them in any way, I just wanted to be in conversation).

Ya sas,

The workshop was nice overall, the material the leaders provided was engaging and interesting and the videos they shared were new to me. I was super excited to look into the topic further on my own. I wish they would have provided some resources for further study. The participants were I think genuinely engaged even if some of them occupied an uneven amount of time. I'm not sure I as a leader would have interrupted either, I'm just sharing the feeling I had of some people taking more time often driven by their own excitement. Three days were a great span to get to know people and feel comfortable but not to feel that it is so long that people lose interest and are fatigued. Maybe we can do a follow up event next semester? If you have any questions for me let me know.

Thanks,

(Marija R.)

Gusten: Atanas and I can help make the wooden ramps with Enar

Ιωάννα: I will make the metal one for the exterior and can help with the sink adjustment.

Atanas: Thank you Ιωάννα, I will reinstall any power outlets and wiring that needs to change, but I could only do it tomorrow and the day after, then I will be gone for two days.

Μέλπω: OK, just keep in mind that while her chair is the standard L106,7cm x W63,5cm she also needs a stowaway space for when she doesn't need it (L100cm x W28cm x H93cm).

Ιωάννα: OK, thanks Μέλπω. I can look at the floor plan and try to figure something out. If not, we can find something temporary while coming up with a solution that Edwige and Keen will find suitable.

Summer Book Club

Dear all,

For next month's book club these were the suggestions we collected, they all look super interesting. Jones' new book deals with being a Black fierce femme which we think many here would benefit from reading, the second is the Nadleehi manifesto that some of us have been discussing a lot lately, the third is Al Numan's book on second and third generation Syrian-Greeks.

Vote by clicking on the tick next to each book.

We will send out the finalist on the 31st so please vote until the 30th.

Thoughts

OK. I feel upset. I didn't want to share it with the entire group on Thursday but it felt very conflicting for me to have a discussion on awareness workers when we were detailing their responsibilities and role to be similar to a law enforcement, rule enforcement maybe. I feel upset. Unsettled. That was the first time.

My disdain for law enforcement, the police, was momentarily questioned and any RSA<sup>i</sup> was momentarily questioned upended even. Here we were here we were sitting these five queerfeminist mostly non-binary people having a practical discussion on ideological terms not realising. We didn't realise that what we were trying to implement affords power to some over others. We didn't realise that.

Power that is bound to be misused not out of ill intent but out of ignorance what if the person supposedly misbehaving is a neurodivergent person. What if they are deeply in the moment simply enjoying the music too much and make others uncomfortable. What if they are alerted to the presence of a known abuser but evaluate them as "not having done anything wrong". Knowledge of all substances and their potential effects and knowledge of a non-hierarchical lexicon of inclusion can't prevent misreading, assumptions or profiling when this occupies one of the awareness worker's inevitable blind spots unseen spots remember that. Is this what we are meant to do.

I feel confused. I feel uncertain of my own ideological position. Work towards the dismantling of the police their substitution with a task force of social workers only to then substitute both by training our own rule enforcers. From within the community. How are we different from police forces when they started looking for diversity hires from minorities almost 60 years ago to a look more representative and friendly but more importantly to exploit intel from within tight-knit communities. Even Poulantzas would find this reformist.

Have I misunderstood everything we talked about? I need to re-read our documents. I don't know if I should express any of my concerns. I would like to share it with K. and Th. but would feel too vulnerable to speak out in front of the entire group. Leaving that there for now. I need a positive activity. I want to [end of recording]

Points to be changed from the old mission statement (agreed upon on June 13, 2017)

- Gender, Sexual, Romantic assignments:
  - a. Group #1 proposal:
    - i. We propose the explicit usage of the term “Nádleehi” in our manifesto when referring to minoritarian communities and groups whom we stand for, with, and who currently or in the future

i. @ Δe tim ppl usuali introdusd or identifid Δemselvs θru Δeir most produktiv aktiviti, usuali Δe 1 Δat ernd Δem a liviη (wif̄s was nesesar̄i). Most ppl wud hav 1 suf̄s element, molto hav̄iη studid & traidn eksklusivli 4or Δat. OΔer suf̄s elements wer kuntri of ansestors & ag.

might make up Diotima. This is a conscious political decision for us, in line with moves to decolonise gendered subjectivities and move away from Anglo terms. The term was first proposed for usage on a larger scale by Navajo Nation Prof. Manaba B. Todicheene in 2033 in her speech at the 2033 pride march in Oaxaca de Juarez. Prof. Todicheene insisted on the importance of partly abandoning Western/Northern/White/Colonial terminologies and categories for the diversity of those that they erased. In so doing, she argued, we show solidarity with the First Nations and Indigenous people and an awareness of the lasting and multifaceted effects of colonialism-capitalism. Nádleehee, as a cultural term, has significance as it allows for fluidity and simultaneously forces us to bring into today precolumbian understandings of genders and relationalities. We propose its usage aside the terms currently used in our manifesto as we don't want to alienate those who have already struggled to come into terms with those and for whom Queer, Intersex, Lesbian, Trans*, Gay, still hold value, not over Nádleehee but next to it.

ii. We propose the inclusion of “quia” and “qvir” as additional assignations signaling a proximity and alliance with decolonising efforts from the Global South as well as post-soviet subjectivities who are still struggling to find space in international LGBTQIA+* communities, especially since the political escalation of the sociopolitical situation in the area and the increased militarisation the imperialist project has brought. We stand in solidarity with them, and pledge to help them be safe from the regime's violence.

b. Group #2 proposal:

i. Continue to use “queer” by claiming it and accepting its Anglo/Western influence of which we are products, perhaps writing it in our scripts

c. Group #3 proposal:

i. Eşci from eşcinsel (pronounced /'eʃ.dʒi) to have something culturally-relevant, non-derivative, and not appropriative.

- Our new manifesto should explicitly speak of necropolitics for human and all other animals.
- Non sexual naturism is allowed in all areas. Towels/pareo are necessary on public seating.

Nenet: They are trying to get an appointment with a therapist but from what they've said they are coping quite well.

11:03 @ 23.05.2034

Nenet: It was the first time an incident took such proportions so they are still shaken but overall they reached out and have managed to feel connected.

11:04 @ 23.05.2034

Nenet: I think maybe they took some days off, I didn't ask though. They sent me videos of their housemate's dog and her friend which was a) nice to see and b) nice to know they can enjoy some silliness.

11:10 @ 23.05.2034

Max: I'm not shocked with any of that, it happened 10 years ago too as soon as he got reelected and the far right entered the parliament (again!) they felt even more justified. Remember Anna?

Topic: Mori to eidame ki auto finally! (Party klp)

Agapes,

Chris, Alfa and I are finishing the preparations of the party and the info booth shifts. We have the medical team's shifts and with their help we've already established the content of the info flyer (all the info on the vaccine and its availability, what to do if you're on PrEP, safer-sex right after the initial vaccination, status testing, age etc). As a sex worker I personally will try to cover most shifts as I would like word to spread that we are sex-work positive. We have already established the confidential, the non-label, and the CNM context.

We were also thinking of having a box for krišs. Their injury has left them unable to cam or irl and a bit of extra income would be good for them right now. I know they don't need it so we were thinking of it as a small "happy you're better" gift. Do you all agree? Thoughts? We were thinking the talent could draw everyone's attention soon after the show starts and start to pass it around.

Let me know you thoughts,

M.

A&C WG - Points for meeting

- Art buying options from artists that have expressed interest (linocuts, embroidery, recorded theater play in Damiá), examine possibility of finding a space for an exhibition for them before 2036 (MoAVetar is booked till December '36)
- Mary and Annie suggestion to acquire zine collection from Torres (details?)
- Discuss showing art by problematic people. Annual check of our archives and collection and see if there are any issues (who wants to?). Make more detailed/updated accountability step by step guide for when we are cancelled.
- Repairs in MoAVetar gallery (bathroom tap, back glass panel)

Hello Ruba,

Yüksel and I found these stones on the shore and was wondering if you could help us identify them. The white one has little holes/dots on it and is very smooth. The blue/gray one is not like that but at certain angles reflects light somehow.

Thank you very much in advance for your time and knowledge!

Warmly,

E.

Hello Etta and Yüksel,

The white one is probably limestone (the holes might be from sponges or corals that “drilled” in it thousands of years ago). The blue/gray one is some type of metamorphic blue shist with amphiboles (perhaps glaucophane).

Looking forward to seeing your finds and what you have learnt about basalts, shists, and limestone!

Best,

Mars Race, Taxation, Reparations, Turist “Development”

Since crossing the ecological tipping point (in 102027HE) many entities have relied merely on reputational improvement and rushed to adopt an optics-based strategy only to the benefit of their company, industry or brand, while blaming consumers and claiming individual responsibility to be the primary reasons behind environmental disaster (and then rushing to profit from selling overpriced eco-friendly goods and services).

We realise once again that the change in the calendar era was merely an attempt at pacifying environmental activists and did not have the societal impact it was expected to have. It has gone mostly unnoticed by those who continue to pollute and destroy ecosystems around the world, most of them on land gained through violence.

As we had been warning for decades now, the private sector has been by far the most disastrous and, of course, the pace of environmental disaster has only picked up since the global shift in privatisations of national parks, wildlife habitats, and the lift on the few remaining regional fishing moratoria. Natural areas have been turned to desolate croplands at a faster than ever pace and the world's poorest people are the ones experiencing the harsh aftermath of those choices. Mass tourism (party tourism and booze cruises, poverty tourism, sexual exploitation tourism etc) has affected communities, individuals, and the flora and fauna of sea and land and has only been pushed back by small activist initiatives on the local level. As entire island habitats have been resortified, the locals who can still afford to live there have had to move further away from the main port towns as these are turned into gramable rentlands to be treated with exoticising admiration or disdain by neocolonisers.

It's been 18 years since the ratification of the Paris Agreement and even if several countries had not left it, it would still be an empty gesture since it never set emissions targets to begin with and burdened low income and low emissions countries to follow the same rules as the major polluters. It's been five years since the Biodiversity Agreement and the oceans' stocks have continued to drop and the acidification to rise. With the majority of Mediterranean and Black seas fish being fished at double the sustainable levels and 73% of the assessed stocks overfished, and only 9% of the Great Barrier Reef remains and projected to be completely gone by 2069 we have been at dire straits for decades.

Now six billionaires from high income countries (most of whom pay miniscule or zero taxes) are competing for the colonisation and potential terraforming of Mars and their countries stand behind them as they hope for new untapped resources and an expanding job market.

The extinction of the Polar bear in 2026, the extinction of the Amur Leopard, the Black and the Javan Rhino in 2027, the extinction of the Sumatran Elephant, the Vaquita, the Blue Whale, and the Asian Elephant in 2028, the extinction of the Western Lowland Gorilla in 2029, and the Bluefin Tuna in 2032, the depletion of the Mediterranean and North Atlantic fisheries in 2032, and the plant and fungi 60% reduction in the past decade alone signify how disastrous colonialism and capitalism have been for the planet. The Mars Race is just a symptom of those systems and a clear indication that poor people's lives are dispensable and rich people think they can start anew factoring in only temporary profit and refuge.

It's time to stop trying to implement "realistic" and "reasonable" agendas and instead rise up and demand wealth redistribution in the form of return of stolen land, reparations to descendants of abducted, dispossessed, and/or enslaved people as well as to the lands of origin whose people and resources were taken, and high taxes to those richer people remaining. No tax havens, no exceptions. Policy change has to happen at a grassroots level. We have the tools, the experience, the will and we can share the know-how and we will use our appropriated resources.

Dolls like my friends, dolls like me!

A workshop for people aged 4 - 10.

If you are having a hard time finding dolls that look and sound like you, your friends, your family and you always wanted one join us in this workshop and let's design and make a doll like you! The dolls can have any skin tone, any body size and shape, use any assistive devices necessary, have your type of hair, wear any accessories and clothes you wear.

Bring your ideas and, if you want, your drawings. Together we will learn a brief history of small business/independent Black dolls (Richard Henry Boyd and Mark Ruffin) and disabled dolls (Oni Awotwi & Klea Gonxhe). Together with a pedagogue and an illustrator you will design the doll you would like to have for yourself or to gift to a friend. Then a seamstress and a product designer will create the doll.

The workshop is offered by DLU, a registered charity which provides educational workshops and offers the dolls for free. DLU is supported by donations***.

Nana:

Ya group,

My two cents: the Med Libra is not going to change the economy and is still not designed to protect the poor. It is simply a way for rich tourists from the North to enjoy the Med region's nature while consuming irresponsibly, relying on air travel and yachting, and drive prices up making land and housing unaffordable for locals in tourist areas. I agree with Selamawit and propose that we switch exclusively to blockchained post-crypto*. Edwige can help us navigate the practical aspects of transitioning and mining sustainably.

Nikolai:

Ya to everyone,

I'm a bit concerned as a) I don't know that much about the medlib and b) a text from 1988 is not enough to put my concerns to rest with regards to trade and safeguarding the most vulnerable of us.

I think we need a series of meetings to address ideo and prac concerns. Right?

Selamawit:

Ya all,

@Nikolai: I get your concerns and I'm happy to have the series of meetings to discuss. I would suggest we first have them within the eco group and then (once we have some basic idea of what it is we want, what the pros and cons are) we present them to the plenum. Maybe end of May or something. How do you all feel about that?

Silvia:

Ya, I have been following the conversation for a while feeling unsure of where I stand. Would be super thankful to Selamawit if she gave us all further info. We all have some experience with proto-crypto but a switch is a whole different animal, no? It's not only what it might mean for us to make that switch but to communities around the world that learn from us. What I'm saying is: we need to think of the bigger ramifications and our position in supporting/not supporting a financial instrument designed to support the "slower" economies in the area. So for me it's geopolitical primarily and what it means in terms of optics as well as policy. I can text everyone a scheduling survey a bit later, I have to get home and charge my laptop*, like, now!

Dear friends,

We would like to invite you to two sex party days (and nights). On Friday 12:00pm-10:00am Sexerotopia and on Saturday 12:00pm-10:00am we have our monthly sex and sensual party.

Come, meet new people, re-connect with old acquaintances and friends and have fun!

Sexerotopia is a space for WLW*, transmasc folx, bi women, queer women, veldian folx*, pan women, guys, lesbians, dýkes, lbne, intersex folx, puppies, halwa*, non-binary folx, transfem folx, MLM*, male folx, 106s, wergender folx, mins, gay folx, bi, pan, and queer peeps, digin, Götveren, bears, agorines, daddies, kittens, Yota5*, maricas, Ammas*, and Brud-erins of all bodies, and abilities, and attractions are welcome. 18+ only.

Both nights are organised by teams that include locals, sex professionals (workers, educators, certified assistants) and intend to be inclusive and accessible spaces of fun and connection. Feel free to bring your own assistant along, but please inform us on registration. You are welcome to drop by and stay for as long as you like whichever time of day or night. Some times are usually quieter (12pm-5pm) whereas others are usually more busy (8pm-3am). The film Yes, We Fuck! (de la Morena, Centeno, ES, 2015, 60') will be screened both nights at 8pm in Spanish with English subtitles.

The event is open to all kinds of consensual sexual and sensual practices between adults. It goes without saying that we are kink/BDSM/fetish/vanilla positive. Both days/nights are sober-only (tanaka substances) and pic/video free. Safer sex supplies will be available on site (dams, condoms, gloves, tzinavopoltos, PrEP, HVax, PlanB). On site, as always, will be two sexual assistants, two awareness workers, and a safer sex consultant. Feel welcome to bring your own (clean/ed) toys and gear. There will be some showers that are assigned for showering and others for playing. There are locker rooms in the entrance where people can change and a room adjacent to that to be used as a resting space where sex is not welcome and where you can get refreshments and food. The sex/sensual-designated areas are one large room (80 m<sup>2</sup>) and two smaller rooms (a dark room of approx 20 m<sup>2</sup> and a dungeon of approx 15 m<sup>2</sup>).

Please register with your name and pronouns, mentioning any special needs, wishes, care you may have/need. Our team will send you the rules of conduct and also (if you want) erotica they have written to get you in the mood, so please let us know if you would like to receive it.

Spread to your contacts and look forward to seeing you there!

Caria: Ya, could anyone of you look at the text and let me know if it needs any amendments? It covers the basics about the event and offers the details of the legal expenses account and the situation. I will add the names of the lawyers as soon as Nenet shares them.

Mariam: Looks good to me, maybe make a brief reference to why Turkey is continuing the travel ban and not allowing Sidar specifically to enter from Kurdistan.

Per: Good point, thanks for putting it together Caria. Send it over and I will format it for different media. I already have the images.

Nenet: Thanks everyone, @Caria I'm sending the details tomorrow when Laleh is back from her time off. Then I can send the soli party announcements and invitations.

Caria: Thank you! Also, today April 3, let us play this <https://youtu.be/Tduu20lLksQ> in memory of Helin Bölek.

Welcome friend!

This is a project I've worked on for several years (on and off) and which transpired as a wish for a queer, feminist, utopian, insular society that would be concerned with issues of dis_ability, race, species, nature, and class. It ended up being a sometimes utopian, sometimes dystopian, mostly anti-utopian experimental ergodic<sup>i</sup> novel about a non-insular community based on fictional archives and editorialisation. I see it as an artwork which continues my work on language and ways of relating that resist (but still suffer from, and attempt to work through) oppressions and discriminations.

The book is composed of five chapters, each representing a different era of the evolution of the community of Δiotima/Δeir*land. Its story is presented in fragments; documents of all kinds that were preserved over the millenia—often by the members of the community themselves in time capsules in order to give glimpses of their everyday lives, feelings, and thoughts to their descendants and anyone interested.

Solidarity, tensions, genuine concerns, the dichotomy of working to create a small community that is kind and reflected vs working to impact the outside world all appear through the various “archival” documents.

Starting in 2020, the fictional collective sees a growth as more people are looking for possibilities of experiencing rural life, usually prompted by the Covid-19 pandemic. Emails, texts, administrative logs, letters to authorities, event announcements, code of conduct discussions all give a fragmentary picture of what the collective looked like at the

i. The term “ergodic” is borrowed from Espen J. Aarseth who used the Greek words “ergon” (work) and “odos” (path) to refer to literature that requires nontrivial effort on behalf of the reader to traverse the text. I use it to refer to the different languages, sociocultural contexts, discourses, backwards and upside down text orientations the reader will be exposed to here, not to imply that other texts only demand “trivial” effort. (Aarseth 1997, 1).

time, as well as the constant work it demanded to keep going. Through mostly mundane documents, a picture begins to take shape of what the landscape, its inhabitants, and their lives look like. The texts in the first chapter are in several languages, reflecting the composition of the community and its attitude towards multilingualities, a recurrent theme in my work (T. 2020, Engel and T. 2023).

The next chapter, set in 2034, shows some of the improvements in working life—hard won by unions over the past decade—and the things on the agenda still to be won. It is also focused on the aftermath of Covid-19 and the wars in the region that have altered reality globally. Environmental issues, the collective’s mission statement discussions, administrative processes, events, and hobbies, all paint a more detailed picture of the characters; their relationship to the rest of the world; and the eventual collapse of the European Union in the aftermath of the Russian/NATOnian conflict. Political statements, creative texts, and more intimate documents offer insights into their attitudes towards sex and the sex-lives of the residents and locals. Dis_ability, technological advancement, the finances of the community, and the facilitation of communication between non-human animals and human animals also appear.

Chapter three is set in 2060 in the aftermath of major geopolitical shifts and significant environmental disasters and foreshadows the unavoidable and impending collapse. It offers glimpses of quotidian life similar to the previous decades (events, knowledge-sharing, animal welfare, cultural events), political texts pledging solidarity to affected populations (though now who/where these are have shifted drastically). Languages other than English are still present but more and more communications take place in English as the lingua franca with the help of (AI) translators/interpreters. At the same time, personal, narrative, creative, and emotional elements appear in texts throughout, centering individual persons parallel to the focus on the collective. A further shift from sexuality and gender, towards class, race, and neocolonialism indicates the state of politics and the adaptiveness of the collective (and its changing make-up) to ever more urgent anti-discrimination politics.

Chapter four makes a big leap and shows a few documents from the years 2250 to 2265 in the aftermath of the big nuclear holocaust and environmental and societal collapse. The archive was majorly disrupted during this time (and long after it) as lots of digital data was demagnetised, and people couldn't waste resources in writing/recording non-essential things, while cultural production and language became increasingly more impoverished. The few documents that were saved and restored paint a picture of underground living, meagre nutrition, disrupted social cohesion and an avoidance of creative or emotional expression. Here, I am not interested in the whys and hows of the cataclysmic event. We all know why as we see it play out each day. It will eventually reach a crescendo. I'm interested in the conditions during it and its aftermath.

Chapter five, the final chapter, takes another big leap into the future and narrates the new world of 3009 which prioritises egalitarianism, feelings, comfort, and kindness, while still struggling with unresolvable facets of the human condition. While it hits a more utopian tone, in large contrast to the previous chapter, it is testament to those who persevered and implemented ecologically and antidiscriminatorily sensible changes, prioritising life over profits. It portrays a habitus that doesn't revolve around work or labour but around skills and preferences and discourages antisocial mentalities with kindness. Affect is reflected in the tone of many of the texts featured here and space is given to discussions on arts and culture, as people have more time to invest in those given the limiting of the working day and week. Experiencing the environment and connecting with nature in non-harmful and non-disruptive ways is also hinted at here. Education and a sensibility of pedagogy that is democratic and critical of hierarchies has become the norm. Technological advancement (no longer at odds with nature) also allows people to experience and create art, the emotions and thoughts of others, and to feel they can relatively safely be guided into multisensory experiences. Here, race and class have taken a back seat to the primary discriminations which are based on origin and species; (not because they have necessarily been satisfactorily resolved, but rather because other minorities arose that attracted more wrath); in this time, discrimination mostly targets synthetic and hybrid people and people from the solar colonies of the moon and Mars, so the collective (which, by now, has turned into a town) reframes their inclusive politics along those lines.

This chapter is written in its entirety in Medlish, a Mediterranean variety of English of the 30th century infused with Arabic, Cypriot Greek, Cypriot Turkish, Greek, Italian, Kaliarda, Lubunca, Mikrasiatika, Spanish, Persian, Portuguese, and Turkish. Nautical terminology situates the island somewhere in the Mediterranean basin but it is left open where exactly that is, or whether its location shifts. In some ways, the ambiguity of the locus of the collective at the centre of this book gestures not only towards a playful openness where each reader constructs their own map; but also, in terms of methodology, towards Todorova's "balkanism," a specific geographical area, yet a melange of Byzantine, Ottoman, near-Eastern, islamic, and christian (orthodox and catholic) elements focusing on the difference within rather than in opposition to, say, the West (Todorova 2009). While AI interpreters and translation apps allowed people to speak in their preferred languages, still there was a need to forge a lingua franca that reflects the region's geographical, cultural, and environmental features, and which would be critical of any colonial and imposed language by undoing it, expanding it, customising it, ultimately reclaiming it through disidentification, the aesthetic practice in which dominant signs and symbols are reimagined through engaged performance (Muñoz 2009, 169), in this case, linguistic. It has many slang elements, new expanded words on emotions, emoticons, or their offshoots, often (my own) neologisms based on slang. It indicates a turn away from formality, rigour, and respectability and towards emotional expression and a widespread respect of it.

Medlish's orthography is flexible and often distinctly personal. Two regional varieties seen in words like "share" ("šar" in the Northern dialect influenced by slavic elements, "ϣar" in the southern one influenced by Turkik, Arabic, and Coptic elements, and "jar" in the non-regional "standard" variety) are all used alongside each other; language, at that point, is explicitly non-prescriptive and inclusive of regional and idiosyncratic elements (e.g. both "musikian" and "musijian" exist). This writing makes this chapter, and parts of this book in general, rather a puzzle for the online translators, dictionaries, or etymology services many of us rely on. When most of our online texts and resources are used by AI to learn, ever-evolving slangs resist this (at least for now) seemingly undecipherable especially when combined with code-switching.

Several things were important to me that led to the development of this register: that the migrant experience is enacted by non-migrants; that the need for direct relation and connection creatively overcomes obstacles but is not perfect and doesn't demand full, perfect understanding to work; that the powerful can't always have access to everything—AI/LLM that for a while won't compute it, enacting subaltern practices like Glissant's opacity—and that as an author I play and come up with some problem-solving as well as imagining, through humour. Fashioning a language means working on an aesthetic that will automatically create a connection to the past and the languages/dialects/registers it derives from, those it borrows from, as well as to hint where the influences/changes might have come from; through which events and power shifts that is. The language is, of course, imperfect, often a critique on language usage itself; the ambiguities, the assumptions, the mistakes. It includes things I know and things I don't know and either speculate, or tried to—epidermically—understand as I really wanted to include them (such as hints at developments in sociocultural contexts and their histories I don't intimately know).

As a migrant, I use translators and dictionaries daily and I live knowing that I will not understand things in my daily life, which makes me uncomfortable. This experience is, I think, one that cuts across migrants (and other linguistic minority communities like the Deaf) and shapes our lives, relation to others, and sense of self. It manifests in different forms throughout my work and found its way into this project too.

Another important element is the “naughtiness” of evading being understood online by anyone; offering instead a key to those who will take the time to playfully engage. I have worked before with Édouard Glissant's concept of opacity—the minoritarian tactic expressed often as linguistic ingenuity to avoid being understood, and thus be reducible, to an oppressor while creating creative and playful moments of disobedience. As Glissant writes,

As Mediterranean myths tell us, thinking about One is not thinking about All. These myths express communities, each one innocently transparent for self and threateningly opaque for the other. They are functional, even if they take obscure or devious means. They suggest that the self's opacity for the other is insurmountable, and, consequently, no matter how opaque the other is for oneself (no myth ever provides for the legitimacy of the other), it will always be a question of reducing this other to the transparency experienced by one self. Either the other is assimilated, or else it is annihilated. That is the whole principle of generalization and its entire process. (1997, 49)

And further:

Agree not merely to the right to difference but, carrying this further, agree also to the right to opacity that is not enclosure within an impenetrable autarchy but subsistence within an irreducible singularity. Opacities can coexist and converge, weaving fabrics. (1997, 190)

Here, with Medlish, I wanted to enact some of the traits of creolisation, its various slangs, code-switching, and multilinguality to indicate a semiotic-cognitive, emotional, and political thought that arises specifically from a context with tensions and multiple sociocultural elements.

Lastly, I wanted to play with imagining what would change in the language acting as the foundation/lingua franca; which elements will be removed, which elements added (conceptually as well as linguiculturally) and how phonemics and punctuation might shift.

Language is the ultimate open-source, accessible to all, bottom-up creative tool and expressive system; here, I had the opportunity to play with it in ways that often academic publications would take issue with. To create Medlish, I made changes to English based on simplification (a trend many languages have followed in the last millennium). I used a combination of symbolic communication systems (emojis and emoticons); letters from various registers of the region; numbers; and phonetic symbols. Digraphs are substituted by local letters (also acting as mathematical symbols) or International Phonetic Alphabet (IPA) symbols that make the pronunciation of the word less ambiguous and more predictable for speakers/readers, double and unpronounced letters disappear, symbols and numbers become officially part of words, and internet slangs used initially to avoid social media censorship, become commonplace.

Words like “xekifin” are indicative of what I’ve done: I took «Ξεκηφήνω», which means «εργασία» (work, or literally “de-droning”) in Kaliarda, based on the habit of the drones not to work and consume the products of work of the [female] worker bees; I applied a corruption-based logic, in which the final vowel disappears, and slightly moved it semantically to mean “project” (n.).

In Medlish, you will notice certain words, phrases, or sentences appear in italics. Some “authors” use italics to infuse emotion and accent in their writings while others don’t. Italics are seen in administrative and other more formal documents as well as in more personal ones, which more directly express the idiosyncrasy of each “author” in an era that is generous to emotional expression in its various forms. Some neologisms I invent in the book are explained, while others are part of the various easter eggs hidden throughout.

This is a book that proposes to be read with others who understand different languages, and which you can experience together in collaboration.

The Lexikon at the back (containing all the terms that appear in bold in the book) is meant to both continue the fiction that this is a book from the future but mostly to offer another look at ourselves in our current time. Ultimately, while the challenge of imagining futures was part of my intention, it was more so, as Anna Carastathis said, “making the present strange” and somewhat funny in its absurdity, more than accurately predicting a future, that became important. For each chapter, characters were gradually created with information like their age, skills, interests; their reasons for joining the community and their role within it; their education/training/work/labour; and their relationships with other members. However, their stories are told in an abstract and fragmentary manner; this is not a book with a linear narrative focused on the stories of individual characters. This book is not meant to be the story of someone in particular. Rather, the protagonist is the collective and to a lesser degree the region as it appears through the evolution of the collective and its relation to the world at large with the tensions, disagreements, struggles, progress, backsteps, frustrations, and desires expressed.

As I've mentioned, the entries in the archives themselves are both functional as well as creative. There are poems, lyrics and chords, free-writing, school assignments like essays on a specific topic, references to textbooks, creative writing, forms or content referencing literature and/or oral traditions from the region, mythological references, typographic interventions and experiments with scripts, audio (reading certain subchapters like 2.1) available online, and recipes. You are invited to try the recipes and taste something similar to the author(s), strum the chords on your guitar, listen to the voice/sounds/songs to add to the experience of the visual reading.

I don't aesthetically like everything but some entries felt necessary to indicate different states of mind, aesthetics, journeys, and ages. Some I've written when I was 15; I was recently able to read them again, and they hold emotional value in how they frame my context, understanding of the world, and life on an island. Others I've crafted over years, changing, adapting, expanding, and struggling. Others still, I've written with "ease" and speed. Working with a fictional archive, like all archival research, entails engagement with fragmentary things and the effort to understand something or someone. I also see the process as connected to trauma and ruminations, as living archival elements, which are also profoundly fragmentary, force one to time-travel.

My lived experiences are collected from places both similar and different to this fictional collective and come from my brief political party affiliation, my satellite participation in students' associations, living in flatshares, being part of artistic/cultural collectives, living in different countries, and creating art spaces and festivals. Despite the different circumstances between the collective's members and my own life, there are elements of autotheory present. In each of the book's documents, biographies take a back seat to the focus on relationality and the language one uses to call for something, to criticise something, to explain one's thoughts and emotions regarding a situation of inequality, a situation of possibility and means, learning something new wanting to share it, learning something with others and passing it on. Requests, demands, pleas, boundaries, memories, imagination, creativity, pedagogies all appear along various communication styles.

A lot of speculative fiction centres around the Northern, Western, industrialised world (Octavia Butler, Charlotte Perkins Gilman, Margaret Atwood, Ursula K. Le Guin, M. E. O'Brien and Eman Abdelhadi) or its ideologically and technologically expanded universe, with some works focusing on regions that have been colonised by Western empires (Nnedi Okorafor, Nuotama Frances Bodomo, Naomi Rincón-Gallardo). I felt the need to explore what speculative fiction could be in the region I come from and identify with the most without being consistently explicit about the specifics of it. A region influenced by caliphates, empires, republics, sultanates, corsairs and other pirates, merchants and sailors from all over. More recently it has been visited by increasing numbers of tourists and its borders guarded by state coast guards and Frontex; at the southeastern border of fortress Europe, it having been turned into an airbnb/investors' paradise, a commercial and cruiseliner's route, an execution ground, a pipeline path, a military base, and a vile cemetery. Politicians, parties, and distinctly Greek elements are often not explicit and when they are they are not consistent enough to anchor the island clearly somewhere specific.

I wanted to focus on queerness and feminism at least while it would still be relevant and then follow its intellectual and affective descendants. As a migrant, being neither here nor there, writing this book has also been a way to connect me with the Mediterranean—if not its present, since I don't currently live in the Mediterranean, then with its future, minimising the distance, both spatial and temporal. I am writing this in my apartment, in the landlocked country I've lived in for a decade while listening to "sea sounds" on my noise cancelling headphones. Here I am, looking back at you from behind the text.

As an ergodic piece of work, this project demands more effort from the reader than books usually might. It invites the reader to give themselves time to figure out Medlish; this may include looking things up in the Lexikon, in translators/dictionaries, or search engines, often not finding anything, as words might be strange transliterations of Kalliarda, Ottoman Turkish, Cypriot, Mikrasiatika, or my own neologisms. It welcomes a generous attitude on the part of the reader, wanting to know and making the effort; but when the reader can't understand something, they can allow themselves that, and still engage with other aspects of this "archive." In a way, the book expects the reader to be a participant in the discovery and processing of the documents (in all their languages, styles, formats) and the content (which often anticipates a contextualising effort to occur). The "archive" blends administrative documents—like gardening logs, the main purpose of which is to show some of the activities and work of the collective, as well as hint at the weather, climate, and landscape—with poems, lyrics, and short stories that show the specific creative and aesthetic outlets of the collective. As with any archive, the archivists dictate the narrative by choosing which documents to include and ordering them; but you, dear friend, are welcome to make your own journey, and thus create your own narrative, through them.

I'm interested in archives—though nowhere near to how my maternal grandfather revered them (he spent every morning at the historical archive after he retired; I still have no clue what he was doing there). I am more interested in the possibility the archive affords me as a format of fragmentary writing and the "editingorialisation" it allows both me, as the author, and the reader to do. Experimental literature, as well as other forms of art, have influenced me; but it is mostly through writing this that I got the opportunity to look back and find so many authors and projects that I'd like to still engage with and hope to.

This project, perhaps more than others, is unfinished; and so it should be. I want to continue thinking about it and working on the Medlish language (perhaps with the feedback of readers and friends). Especially as I meet more people and encounter their linguistic knowledge and overall perspective, and current events unfold, these continue to shape Medlish and my ideas of the future. This is a book which, due to it being written by a single author, is inevitably limited in its attempt to touch upon so many complex geopolitical issues. It's testament to the limitations of a single perspective, in this case mine; and, at the same time, a challenge to myself: to see what I, alone (sort of), could come up with. The wrong "predictions" I made in 2020 remain part of the narrative as it was never my intention to be "right" about the future; but, rather, to explore the challenge and limitation of one's mind (and anxieties) in exploring something so broad as the future of a region and the micro-politics of activist and conscious communities. So, after 2020, the book follows a slightly different trajectory than the events that have transpired since have dictated in "actual" world politics. I could see myself revising and republishing at some point(s) in future time.

This book is part of the Feminist Praxis series of FAC press; the book proposes a feminist sensibility of creativity and discourse; it concerns itself intersectionally with issues of genders, sexualities, and materialities and focuses on multiple voices reflecting diverse (and sometimes conflicting) situated knowledges. Feminists, according to Haraway:

have stakes in a successor science project that offers a more adequate, richer, better account of a world, in order to live in it well and in critical, reflexive relation to our own as well as others' practices of domination and the unequal parts of privilege and oppression that make up all positions. In traditional philosophical categories, the issue is ethics and politics perhaps more than epistemology (1988, 579).

Though this does not purport to be a scientific project—indeed, my need was to work more creatively with pleasure in mind: the pleasure of envisioning, resolving, discovering—it might still be in line with this epistemology and might offer a strange, ergodic, abstract view of idea-sharing in forms that have been (partly due to the patriarchy) so far delegitimised: non-canonical, non-serious, informally written—artistic even. This project follows feminist situated knowledges, which, "open themselves for new, unexpected, unthought-of, and surprising forms of knowledge production, which may unfold from interrelated material-semiotic worlds” (Rogowska-Stangret, New Materialism, 2018). Blending together dominant epistemic frameworks (e.g., the use of the term “queer”); dominant/colonial/imperial languages (English, Portuguese, Spanish, Turkish); emotional/cognitive semiotics; and the particular material conditions of minoritarian subjects gathering in the region from across the world bringing with them alternative frameworks. It might be considered a work of humanity fiction. I am writing this from a partially melancholy position (in Ahmedian terms) as I have adopted a language which is not my first one, have failed to adapt into another, and have not fully given up my first one (Ahmed, 2010). In Anzaldúan terms, I have acquired a tongue that is not quite tamed (yet not wild either). I speak and write in a polyglossia that is bound to disappoint in its hybrid nature of academic buzzwords, therapy-informed ideas, and slangs from the internetz but mainly—and this is where it, at times, disappoints me—in its predominance of English (Anzaldúa, 2012).

The project channels the everyday, the care work, the emotive labour, the pedagogic, the questioning, egalitarian-focused concerns of solidary and collective living. It does not produce explicit theory and is not interested in reproducing the rigour and sovarofaneia of many academic/epistemic forms of addressing the reader. It operates from a future place where academia has been reshaped/built from the ground and is more accessible and research-focused (through creative means). It invites the reader to be an active part of something that works towards a better world but does so in uneventful ways (Koobak et al., 2021). I think Barad’s “intra-action” concept could be relevant here, but I’m not sure I understand it well enough to state that indeed it is. She writes,

[...] what we commonly take to be individual entities are not separate determinately bounded and propertied objects, but rather are (entangled “parts of”) phenomena (material-discursive intra-actions) that extend across (what we commonly take to be separate places and moments in) space and time (where the notions of “material” and “discursive” and the relationship between them are unmoored from their anti/humanist foundations and reworked). (2012, 32)

Instead of “moving the knowing subject away from everything” to perform the God trick, here I share something more along the lines of Haraway’s epistemological sensibility of (a) non-objective, plural, multi-faceted, author(s) who focus on materialities.

I consider this project loosely an artistic research work. I wanted it to include island-based knowledges and what I’ve come to think of as maritime pedagogies; wishful curricula (loosely theorised and organically implemented) of multiculturalism, an appreciation of nature, inclusion of the nautical arts in the everyday, a slowing down that submits to nature and bodies and doesn’t try to subjugate them to profit imperatives. We’ll make landfall when we make landfall.

Another important component in this work is disability and illness, in their materialities and in how they were developed. I often return to Feel Tank Chicago, Lauren Berlant, Ann Cvetkovich, and Karin Michalski to trace an explicit genealogy of feeling bad and incorporating that in the design and content of a project. Working with, through, and against disability and chronic pain is a task one needs to understand as an added task on top of anything else one is doing with the impact of multitasking multiplied. It also factors into the readers’ needs and restrictions. Please don’t feel any pressure to experience this book linearly and cover to cover. Take your time and create your own traces, ephemera in Muñozian terms (Muñoz, 1996), and share them with others if that feels good, reach out if you would like assistance.

In a quote from Wikipedia’s entry on Marlen Haushofer while she was writing her novel The Wall she purportedly wrote to a friend:

“I am writing on my novel and everything is very cumbersome because I never have much time and, mainly, because I can not embarrass myself. I must continuously inquire whether what I say about animals and plants is actually correct. One can not be precise enough. I would be very happy, indeed, if I were able to write the novel only half as well as I am imagining it in my mind.” (...)

The entirety of this passage feels so accurate: the lack of time (usually carved out at the expense of other activities—more urgent, [more] profitable, more [“]important[“] than writing); the fear of embarrassing oneself and trying to avoid that (a fear too real and yet surpassable since she did publish her work, as so do many of us); and the precision about elements of nature (one of the first thing a friend told me upon having been given an early draft was that aubergines couldn’t have been planted when I wrote they were). That increased manifold when it came to geopolitical issues.

To the same friend, a year later, Haushofer writes her reflections on the conditions of writing: the physical act, its toll on her health (headaches), and her overwhelmedness at being expected to multitask or switch between tasks with very different demands (housework and writing). I read the Greek translation of her book in 1999 and still consider it a formative book for me as it depicted an unusual, inexplicable situation through a focus on the psyche of the main character (and the supporting character of the dog), discussing nature, society, and mental health.

I release this project with FAC press’s help and hope for it to diasporise and find those who might take up its challenge. I hope you will enjoy the book and that you might reach out and make it a bidirectionally interactive project; you will find the channels to do, if you wish, throughout the book.

Thank you,
Anna

3.1

After 50 years of social media the age of affect had firmly arrived & substituted the 1st of signs like signs had religion because it. The culture wars of the early 21st century (with war seen as a sign of polarisation orchestrated by political & business interest groups) is now starting to be seen as a potentially fertile ground to explore feelings & emotions & communication ideas & politics through them instead of selling political & philosophical thought from them. We're genuinely proud of them! We hope we don't come across as arrogant or pedantic. We're just so proud of the xekifin they did & indeed this has meant for us who came after them. We're tearful as we re-read their words.

In this chapter we share the evolution & inner-workings of the collective in the aftermath of the seismic geopolitical changes of the 2040s & 2050s. The theological lessons of Transatlantic American colonial politics & the sectarian violence that followed 450 years ago in the US American continent to move to Europe while we live in uncharted NATO territory. Soon after this migration began China's expansive politics with further isolated territories (then known as Tajikistan & Kyrgyzstan) sparking unrest with over 20,000 Tajiks & 13,000 Kyrgyz fleeing either to Russia or Europe in the early days of the annexation. We read through the dox horifid. We always did it together. We wouldn't have been able to do it alone.

The most important reason we focus on this historical period is that it is very clear to the previous 1 is due to the shift in methodological 21st 2 understand the dūnia of us & the other beings. In indeed has been termed "the social media revolution" scientific thought & facts have been pushed to the side with emotions being the primary organising principle behind reading the dūnia.

As you will have noticed, the materials we focus on are part of this volume's diverse in their format, aesthetic, intent, & level of publicity. We wanted to capture brief moments, thoughts, reflections, & feelings & present the collective & its people in the multitude they represent. As the culture back then was mostly + perfection-oriented with a great division between public & private, the 4mer being highly curated & edited & the later often being the locus of insecurities & raw feelings were expressed, we focus on including materials that @ the time would not have been seen as worthy of being public. Dear fellow citizens,

As you know the current NUS administration is pushing the Congress to fast-track a bill that would among other things allow any entities such as legal persons to be legitimate candidates for the presidency in the next election cycle alongside natural persons. This would open the door to companies filing for the candidacy. Since the party that will control the Presidency (from January on), the House and the Senate is willing to do this there is no doubt that they would back any companies (legal persons) that their interests align with (see profits from surveillance/data collection and defence contracts). This would no longer be a democracy. The 2056 NWCE constitution was not only meant to safeguard the NUS from becoming a theocracy again but indeed to ensure that it would remain a secular democratic country ruled by elected representatives above a certain age, below a certain age, and for a limited number of terms. The dangers of a company running (and being elected) for the office of the president would not only endanger citizens due to its only concern being its own further enrichment but would allow such an entity to hold office indefinitely, turning the NUS into a brazen monarchic corporatocracy, the first of its kind.

We call on all of you who are alarmed by this prospect to join us in protest in NUS embassies around the world. Demonstrations are being held in every major city. Use the box below to find out the route of the demonstration in your city.

See you in the streets!

Press Release

Festival Logo
Boulkoumerdotsardo Film Festival's 14th Edition: Alloability and Technology
Announces Open Call for Submissions
May 24th-29th, 2060
P. and online

P. (May 8th, 2060), Boulkoumerdotsardo's 14th Edition is tackling the intersections of Alloability and Technology with the festival's main theme of Puştrilik.

The past years have seen an explosion in accessibility-oriented devices and apps. Through an eclectic screening and exhibition programme and parallel events we want to ask why now, examine what this interest by big tech really means, explore the opportunities it affords, and hear from those who make use of it.

We welcome any and all filmic and video formats (essay, fiction, documentary, porn, live action, animation, short, feature, narrative, experimental, audiovisual and/or multisensorial, screenings, installations) that deal with alloabilities, assistive devices, prosthetics, (opensource) software and hardware, sex toys, assistants, AI, and social media through the prism of Puştrilik. We would like to open up space for persons of all (a) genders, (a)sexualities, of any technological ability and age to exchange experiences and ideas.

Boulkoumerdotsardo is a non-competitive festival without juries and experts, though we do have a preliminary team that screens the submitted films and ensures they satisfy certain sociopolitical criteria prior to acceptance or rejection. Rejected entries will receive an explanatory response listing the opinions/comments of the team. This year's team is composed of Tahriyah Hoti/ she, visual artist (K), Arban Baatar/ they, software engineer/activist (MN), Silas Nilsson/ he, founder of Toys4us (SE), Dr. Amy Wilson/ she, porn performer/podcaster (UK), Ander Etxepare/ they, performance artist (EU)

Parallel to that we are planning a series of educational, actively participatory, events by alloable coders and programmers, activists, and engineers. We aim for these to become sites of connection and idea exchange, radicalisation and empowerment. Some events will be exclusively on-site while others will simultaneously be available online. Details will be announced soon.

The submission process is free and available online at _____
Each person can submit multiple projects but at most 1 will be selected. Deadline for submissions is February 29th, 2060 23:59 (UTC +2).

Participation in the screenings and parallel programme is, as always, donation-based on a sliding scale (see website).<sup>i</sup>

Patricia Highsmith (the black one with the single white chest hair) has to take her medications (cutlery drawer) twice a day. I give them to her with her meals so she doesn't protest too much and a few pats usually do the trick. It might take a few times to get it right, don't fret about it.

Craja (the calico) is very apprehensive of randos coming into his space so it might take a few days but it also might not happen at all for such a brief trip. He can be very particular about the toilet (he has his own one in the bedroom) so please monitor if he goes and let me know if not.

Berenice Abbott is the elderly aunt of your dreams. She will welcome you and pin you down for cuddles, so best you get to her once you're done with Pat and Craja.

Dear Diotimans,

As many of you already know, our friend and comrade Hristofor passed away yesterday after having spent almost half his life living here and being an active and integral part of the community. Hristofor first joined us with Atanas, his partner at the time, in 2020. He quickly became a family friend to us (my parents Dunja, Marija, and Ivana, my baby-sibling Novak, and I) as we had also just joined the project. He helped our parents with tech things and entertained me mostly through slapstick jokes. He didn't get annoyed that I shadowed him while he worked and asked a ton of questions. He was always cheerful, helpful, and kind, always whistling or humming while he worked, always generous and patient with people. In those early days that neither he nor I spoke other languages than Bulgarian and Serbian I like to think we kept each other company as I have come to think of him as a member of our extended family. It is through him I realised my interest in becoming an electrician and had the honour to train next to him.

He trained as an electrician in the shipyard in Varna and then later as a large vessel electrician in long haul passages working under poor conditions. This is where he got asbestosis, which would later cause lung cancer. As an activist and unionist he helped better the working conditions in the shipyard after years of unreported work accidents, unpaid wages, and unpaid overtime. He supported me when I came out as a girl and then later as intersex and non-binary and was my champion whenever I faced discrimination in the shipyard, educating people and supporting me emotionally.

We are very sorry to have to say goodbye to him but we find comfort in knowing he was exactly where he wanted to be, surrounded by people he loved and who loved him, doing what he loved; being a vital member of this project for 40 years, helping shape it with love and care, leaving the world a better place than he found it.

We will be celebrating his life tomorrow Tuesday evening having a big BBQ feast and playing some of his favourite songs. We would be delighted to hear your stories/memories of him in any way you would like to share them (a video projector and a mic will be set up). We would like to also run the hamam and the sauna as an other space where we could mourn/celebrate him, as was his wish.<sup>i</sup>

Ya everyone,

In my last vlog I talked about personal space and my particular preferences and a lot of you responded by sharing your own feelings and ideas on it. So today I thought I'd continue a bit on the topic by addressing some of the very interesting stuff you all shared with me. Today's vid is a big longer than my yoozhe 3min so bare with me pegs!

My friend @loliRose works with quantum physics, let's see what they have to say.

[MUSIK]

[SCRATCH EFFECT]

[@loliRose]

We are made up of space mostly then maybe our self extends beyond the visible body in an aura of approx 50cm radius and that's why we are intolerant of people coming close to us and feel their energy. Our bodies actually physically overlap and touch in those moments.

I didn't know that so I asked them to send me a brief video on it and I'm including it further down the vid and in the meta. But now a word from today's backer, GhostID.

You know how all those data from all your years online follow you and may at times be harmful to your image as you've grown into a more mature and professional person?

GhostID helps you wipe all that is not relevant to who you currently are as well as contacts which might compromise your next job interview. Try GhostID for 30 days with 3% discount by typing OXILIARY in the promo code and get a glimpse of a guilt-free life with a squeaky clean profile! And now back to the show. Here's some more reactions from fellow contents*.

It makes so much sense for me as a massage therapist. A lot of our job is about this intermingling of bodies.

I am a bit hesitant to make a conclusive statement. I would have to see actual research. But it's a very compelling hypothesis.

[KVILTIE MEME]

[@ox_iliarY]

What do you all think? Let me know in the comments and bubbles here or in the verse. And now back to @loliRose for some more dets!

No one told me I could never be of A again. I knew that I would never be of B, or C, and definitely not of D. I thought I was leaving something and leaving the door open. I thought it was up to me. I thought opening another door and entering another was up to me. I didn't realise this too had closed behind me. Where to next? A is no longer an option, in D I feel stuck. In a swamp. Moving sand. Looks stable enough. It envelops you. It swallows you even though it does not want you. Of which am I? Of whom's am I? Who is this "we"? Am I the "they"? We're not monarchs. We can't keep doing this. It's exhausting. They don't tell you this. Other migrants. Other generations. You see them being different and you assume they are of the there cause they are no longer of the here, maybe they never w{h}ere. But once you go to the there. You see. It's not.

I listened to an old song (old in that it's from the 1970s and old in that I knew it already). It gave me chills. It's a great song but I think the chills were partly to do with not having listened to it for years, not having listened to it with anyone for even more years, not having anyone I can discuss it with that already gets it. I then went into a googling spree, the singer, the songwriter, the genre, the instruments, the regions, the genealogy, left activists and resistance fighters. I felt so alone in my attachments. Who can I discuss and share this, who can I emote with on this? No 1. I started scrolling down further and further. Realised I scrolled to the tempo of the song. 9/8 if you must know (2 + 2 + 2 + 3). Finding queer ancestors (born in Evia it turns out), referring to ancestors and other alter_natives.

Dear all,

As you know this coming weekend we will host 3 educators who will talk to us about emotional abuse, medication, loneliness, and health.

These educators appear in retro early 2000s “drag” costumes. These performances looked at gender and took apart the oppressive elements substituting them instead with humour. They play with that historical fashion as a commentary to humour’s situatedness. The 3 educators are all from the House of Horribly.

Their names are:

Miss Treated Horribly (discuss emotional abuse in families of origin, friend circle, and school)

Sir Tenmedicationsdisagreewithme Horribly (song about how medication can help but also have adverse effects and how we know our body better than anyone else)

Miss Understood Horribly (discuss feelings of loneliness, lack of friends, a sense of not belonging)

Feel free to prepare questions for them for the above topics.

Βασικά παίρνεις έτοιμη ζύμη (εμένα μαρέσει η κουρού πχ) και την αφήνεις να ξεπαγώσει και εντωμεταξύ σε μια κατσαρόλα σωτάρεις κρεμμυδάκια, βάζεις ότι λαχανικά θέλεις (καρότα, ντοματα ψιλοκομμένη, κολοκυθάκια, μπρόκολο ξεμαλλιασμένο, μανιτάρια, καμιά φορά βάζω και καλαμπόκι κονσέρβρα) και τα μαγειρεύεις μέχρι να μην έχουν ζουμιά (το αντίθετο των λαζανιών δηλαδή). Τα αφήνεις λίγο να κρυώσουν, απλώνεις τη μισή ζύμη σε λαδομένο ταψάκι, μετά βάζεις όλα τα λαχανικά από πάνω, τρίβεις και λίγη φέτα αν θες, καπακώνεις με την άλλη ζύμη και τα ψήνεις κανένα 30λεπτο (στο μικρό μου φουρνάκι ίσως παίρνει πιο λίγο από συμβατικούς φούρνους). Έτοιμη η πίτα σου! Κιουριά!

It's true, you can read about it here Bürger, Maxi. 2058.
21st Century Architecture and the Interpretations of Tradition.
Vienna: Oikos Verlag.

He writes:

*“In the 21st century, before Ancestralism and New Climate were popular architectural trends, and before the development of eco-odostrom, people built homes that had straight lines, corners, low ceilings, used ‘air conditioning*’ extensively, and were generally very energy intensive. It wasn’t until the late 2040s that the extensive use and mandates for heat-treated wood and natural glue were used and the ban on concrete was imposed.”*

You can see some of the proto-ancestral types of homes in the community. Walk in through the gate and past the quadrant homes, turn right after the co-working space and you will see the first round white homes. These homes are about 500 metres from the sea and not affected by saline humidity as much as the older ones (which, at the time, were allowed by regulation to be this close to the shore!).

This would be what yours would look like with the barium sulfate paint. It really works much better. We plan to refresh ours later this week so we will have tons of paint you could have by the end of April. Take a sample if you want from the tool shed (behind cluster E of the round homes and next to the campsite).

3.19

Ya all,

As you know Cholpon and I have been trying to be more meat for the past 6 months. We are thankful to all those of you (as well as externals) who have supported us and enabled us to make this happen. We wanted to share our experience with you and give the opportunity to any others that may want to try this (for however long a period and to whichever extent they feel they need to) to consider it. We also want to ask for your experience and what impact our offline shift may have had on your lives and ask how we can make it better.

When we first started in early August it was because of the overwhelming inflow of news regarding the earthquake and the ensuing misery porn on socials and news, and later on the corruption crackdown theater in Kyrgyzstan after Nowruz. The latter coincided with the algae overgrowth so we had our hands full here as it was. We thought we would only try it for 2 weeks. We felt a tremendous sense of guilt; for not exposing ourselves to the many terrible things that were happening to other animals, for leaving the rest of you with the weight of knowing and not being able to vent to us. We expected something like this and that is why we had planned from the beginning for the time and resources we wouldn't be spending online to be directed towards giving back to the community. Cholpon had taken up extra shifts in the kitchen and I added more hours to the garden after the rotten algae situation became more manageable.

What we are doing is:

Like most of you we continued to use the alpha thought-jamming tech. We have installed filters on all our inboxes to screen for urgent correspondence, medical news that concern our specialties, and have set auto-responses for patients that we haven't treated in a long time and who may not have received our announcement/newsletter.

We have deactivated our socials (I have only maintained my bdsd* account as active), after posting announcements on all of them.

We have removed our lenses and only use them while in the clinic. We only put our bud on when needed and keep it on the lanyard otherwise. We have put away all mobile individual screens and only used the video projector in the common area to watch content with friends mostly in the evenings.

Each of us has been using a mobile device to listen to downloaded music and books. The device was initially set to be offline for 7 days and then we would reset a time-based code every month (each knew the other's code). We have been doing this every month now.

Cholpon has been off hybrid living for the first time since she was 9.

Cholpon writes: it was extremely difficult to sleep the first 12 nights as my routine had been majorly disturbed. There was no putting on lenses and connecting with teammates and friends on the platform first thing in the morning to learn and discuss the news, there was no breakfast with vids playing in my eyes or the countertop screen, there was no lunch break chat with friends in Osh just getting off work. Most difficult was not having the bud on when going to bed. That was torture. So I allowed myself to use it to listen to relaxing content and nothing else. I tried to walk and swim more during the day to keep my head clear and my body tired for bedtime. It made me irritable and very miserable at first (Jyrgal can attest to that!) but it was worth it. I still miss it but I feel the need to keep this going for a bit longer. I don't know how long, neither of us does. Realistically speaking, we think we might be online at some point in the near future but not in the same way. We hope to gain some habits that we can maintain when going hybrid again and still go meat-only for periods of time. We have instead taken up extra shifts in the kitchen and the garden. We find ourselves being more chatty and enjoy getting the news in a way that feels more organic; few news by few people each day instead of a constant barrage of news from any and every place on every topic and tanaka much filtering.

Overall we have felt able to be more present and calm. We noticed a reduced need to occupy our brains to cover for the loudness experienced inward. The second week we both felt the urge to read the news substantially reduced and even started to listen to audio content less, even when we were both doing things that would normally be great opportunities for music or audio books (kitchen, garden, walking the cats etc). It allowed us to be more present and reduce the inflow of thoughts. I also hope that by continuing it will reduce my ruminations which had gotten particularly difficult to deal with the months leading up to this experiment of ours. I have also been having fewer nightmares, though I'm not sure if that is the sole reason as the increase of physical activity might have played a role too.

We would like to have your consent to continue this experiment and perhaps have others learn from our experience. We want to hear how you have experienced this switch of ours, how it has been working/socialising with us, if you felt burdened by picking up slack from our non-engagement with current news etc.

Even if you decide it was not productive/helpful/positive for the community, we would like to thank you for giving us this opportunity.

Warmly,
Jyrgal & Cholpon

And this exactly is why I felt I had to leave.

And I was not the only dissenting voice, mind you. You have to include a wider sample in the group, it can't just be the majority representing one generation and politely silence others! You can't call everything problematic and shut things down. It's impossible to function in such a collective. Freedom of speech (and thoughts) is seriously imperilled! Please learn and do better. I really wish it to you all.

First aid kit zine on escaping theonomies

Dear reader,

This is the updated version of our 2052 document “Leaving: how to escape abuse”. This one has added information on escaping theonomies, cults, religions, sects, and interpersonal relationships (familial or romantic). A lot has changed since the seismic shift in US/NUS/Conf. States political and social life in the last 8 years. The oppression and control are more audacious than ever but also more and more countries and some of the former states are offering assistance and have in place a network for transfers and accommodation. With the US being an impoverished nation these organisations are supported exclusively by volunteers, so in most cases they can’t offer you funds, but rest assured, emotional support and a couch to spend the night are often good enough!

Comms

Prior to leaving

Online

If you want to talk to others please use VPN. Mandatory, encrypted, deep fake vids only (no filters, only 3L deep fakes)

Offline

Etiherway make sure to keep a secret and not raise any flags. Try going about your day as you normally would.

After leaving

Cut comms with anyone in the regime or groups. Erase your GPS data, all tracking cookies, and go dark if you have to. Make sure you have info in an analogue format you can access at any time (addresses, maps, numbers, names).

What to take with you

Documents

Make sure you have your birth certificate, ID, pass, devices with citizenship accreditation and points, driver's licence. The more of these you have the better. Ideally in both digital and analogue format. If you don't have access to them (they may be in the possession of your guardian*) find out where they are but leave them there until the last minute.

Electronics

Mobile devices if you need them. Make sure you can switch off any geo-positioning functions for at least a period of 48h from the time you start your journey.

Clothes

Wear clothes you normally would wear outside the home but make sure they don't draw attention. Pack an extra change of clothes that can help you blend in for the first few days until you get a chance to get a new set.

Food

Depending on who can help and what arrangements you may or may not have made, it's important to have a sweet and a savory snack and some water. If your safer place is far away, tubes and cans are the way to go. Make sure you don't start stashing them too early or you'll get exposed. If you plan on preparing food outdoors, pack a heating tab and a versatile dish and basic utensils.

Guns

If you have access to information, check the gun laws particular to your State, and the state/country you are heading to as well as the 1s you will be crossing to get there. If you feel it's safer to carry than not to, do so.

Miscellaneous

Medications that are good/necessary for you. Dental care products.

Menstruation care products. Small and light things that are good for your mental and emotional stability (talismans, pictures, smells etc).

Transportation

Is there a transport network you could use? What are the dangers of using it? What are the alternatives? Do you have the funds for tickets? Have you checked the schedule to make sure there is service at the time and day you plan to flee?

Timeline

Plan, plan, plan, and leave no trace

When do you want to go? What are the factors that would make this point in time more ideal than any other: a guardian being away for a brief period, or when their control over you seems to have laxed a bit; some medical emergency on either of your parts; having raised the funds you need. Answer these questions for yourself. If you need to note things make sure they are hidden and/or untraceable.

Who can help? Is there a trusted person, or organisation that can help you (host you/hide you briefly, offer you funds, stall or distract your guardian, become your guardian temporarily, create an opportunity for you to leave)? Make sure you know this person can be trusted and you communicate in time and effectively what you will need from them and when.

Checklist

- Concrete plan and timeframe
- List of informed contacts
- Know where documents are
- Raise funds
- Set date and time
- Charge devices
- Pack documents

- Pack change of clothes
- Pack hygiene products, medications
- Pack snacks, water, food, utensils
- Pack something small and important to you mentally/emotionally

Life after leaving

Becoming safe, staying safe

As much as you may be missing certain people, habits, rituals, places it's most likely it's dangerous for you to be in contact with people who are still there. Only once you feel you've found a place for yourself on the outside and have the resources and love to stabilize you can you start considering getting in contact with people who are still inside to help them. Until then, it's dangerous for you to be in contact with harmful people, hearing hurtful things, and being emotionally manipulated, or guilted/threatened into returning (even if the promise is that it will be brief and you can then leave again).

Recovering emotionally, culturally, socially

Find a trusted emotional teacher, coach, or therapeutic guide who is knowledgeable about boundaries, trauma, abuse, and insecure attachment. Be prepared for the healing to be slow and have setbacks. It's not a linear nor a fast process. Others will be there to help you along the way. Find people you can trust to be patient with you who either have been through a similar trauma themselves or have not but are willing to help and listen. It's for you to decide whether you want to tell your story to people, and if so, how much you want to share and when. Make sure you have thought about it and don't let people bully you into giving them any more than you feel comfortable. You will re-evaluate over time and depending on where you are in the process you may decide you want to share more or less, earlier or later.

Depending on the particulars of your situation you may need to educate or re-educate yourself, learn new skills and technologies and work different jobs. You may need to figure out how you want to present yourself (clothes, accessories, hairstyles). You may want to explore hobbies and activities you enjoy and communities you can belong to.

Take up opportunities to meet new people and listen to their story, their hobbies, exchange information on music, art, food/cooking, sports, crafts. Pick up books on different disciplines and skill-learning. Learn a language and get a tandem partner. Join a hobby community. Volunteer for a cause that is important to you. All these things can help you find a sense of belonging and strengthen your idea of self.

With a 30% increase in the extraction of raw materials since 2050 there is no going back for rural communities. Decarbonisation simply has not happened as linearly or quickly as we hoped governments would implement and as you know in many cases governments halted it altogether going instead back on such promises and deciding to strengthen the fossil fuel industries in the late 2020s and 2030s, with many people of the NW continuing to use private cars and unnecessary flights to commute/travel. Post-dissolution, the EGD (*European Green Deal) was largely abandoned.

What do you think?

Birêz Zerya Xanim,

Ez ji te re ji vî cî grupa ku em lê axavtibûn dinivîsînîm û ji bo te agahiyên me yê şênber hene. Grupa me kempayayek crowdfunding pêşniyar kir. ( Yan bi tenê yan jî buyerên xwe yê çandî yê îsal yê crowdfunding li berbameya xwe, ji kerema xwe zêde bike.)

Ev jî dibe ku 2 hefteyan bidome heta em têra xwe fonan berhev bikin. Wek ku me bal kişandibû ser, heta eger em têra xwe fon nebînin jî em ê heqê bîlêta te û xerca te bixwe bidin. Ez te derbarê van de agahdar dikim lewma tu dikarî nameyeke biyografîk, portre û bernameya kampanyaya derisa xwe ji bo me bişînin. Di heman demê de ez dikarim profîla te ya zanîngê hê û pirtûka te jî qeyd bikim.

Em ê hin ji van agahîyan ji bo bangewazî bi kar bînin. Ji galerîya me Lino, pêşniyar kir ku em dersê di dîrokek zûtir de çêbikin ji ber ku di pêşengehê de pêş de artistek dê biaxive.

Wisa be bo te jî baş e?

Ji bo cîyê mayinê dikarî ligel min bimînin yan jî li mala mêvanan bimînin ji bo mehremiyeta te, tu çawa bixwazî em wisa dîkin.

Dear Social Responsibility and Public Service working group,

I'm attaching here a cost estimate for a home (or set of homes) for up to 12 people as you suggested. Our WG together with Abdirisak and his civil planning expertise and the tech support of Mairi's arch studio looked into halfway houses in the Czech republic, Botswana, and Cyprus (that we all personally knew of) as well as research into other models to narrow it down to what we should and what we could offer along the lines you had suggested. Proposal A repurposes the old marine storage building while B relies on its demolition. Both use modular home and office modules and elements we already have and could repurpose.

I hope that makes the proposal for the abolition of the local "correctional facility" more tangible for the panel and your job lobbying for it slightly easier. From that point on we think we should coordinate to address any NIMBY reactions from the wider community. We are the closest we've ever been to making it happen.

Warmly,

Tshegofatso for SRPS WG

Like when you're fisting two people at once and your hands are gone. There, and not there. Do you have hands or have your hands metamorphosed into people? Are you an appendage that connects them through pleasure and pain?

Imagine it like a scene from Kids (early on in the film) meets Die Klavierspielerin meets Μαθήματα Πιάνου meets the story E had told me (with the forest). I mean, what's that all about, right? Yummy though.

Passage of جبلين

She sailed by herself from Al Hoceima to Beirut, more than 2,600 miles in 39 days. She meant to go there to change her documents, itself the result of a two-year-long journey. She meant for the journey to be carbon neutral and preferably exclusively wind and sun-powered. Initially she thought she would share the journey with others but due to a variety of reasons she had to do it solo and used this time as a meditative journey to finish the painful, stressful, and unkind one she had set out on two years earlier. She prepared with the help of Mariana and Nenet and borrowed Aya's friend's pick up truck (lovingly named "Datsun") over the course of a week and stocked up on fresh produce (some of which she would vacuum-seal), canned goods, and grains. The crowdfunding campaign we had launched earlier that year allowed her to stock up on supplies, petrol (she could only afford an old boat), and install higher wattage soft solars with a new series of batteries from ethically-sourced materials. That would be the first time she would sail such a distance from West to East. She had sailed parts of it during different MIEM* campaigns and she was familiar with many of the conditions, though she always had a crew of four at least. She would make landfall in approximately 30 days according to her initial calculations and then would sail to join us. The island was in transition being part of an archipelago that had only recently become autonomous and had opened its borders doing away with the violence of the coast guard after the EU agency dissolved along with the union.

The contrast at the beginning of her journey were bothersome yet familiar and expected. People kept in touch checking in with her over the internet and radio so for the first six days or so, despite the little sleep, she felt energized by the support everyone showed her. She kept the boat log and her audio diary tirelessly. She also sent us long voice texts usually during the night watch. She spent her time listening to our voices, on messages, audiobooks, and sometimes old podcast episodes. She had promised herself to stop holding on to things that she didn't feel connected to anymore. I guess that was part of the journey. So she listened to podcasts she had downloaded months or years earlier so she could clear out her device. Some were interesting, she gave me synopses often through messages recorded in her quiet, night-watch voice. Most felt odd to her, irrelevant even. They must have been topical when she downloaded them but she couldn't remember anymore what their appeal had been. She also took up knitting again. She would randomly text asking if I like red, green, black, and white, and yellow, orange, and light blue or any other combo of yarn she had bought before leaving. If she didn't like it she would undo and redo it the next day. Different colour combos or a different junction altogether (coaster were the easiest to make).

She moored in a small leeward spot in the port of Carthage for three days while a strong sirocco blew with only small bears.

She moored in Lampedusa for two nights and reunited with Christopher and Renata. They caught up around the fire.

She saw a whale breach in the distance and sent me a shaky video to celebrate the sighting together.

Her anchor dragged so she motored a few miles and got a mooring in the port of Alexandria where she was able to catch up on her sleep. She was able to get more fresh goods and go by the carneggio to get impeller spares as the ones she had fitted before setting off were making strange sounds and she saw they were wearing out fast.

She collected trash throughout her passage and recycled/drew it away whenever she made landfall.

Somewhere a portmaster was extremely rude and shamed her for her accent.

She was ushered by dolphins for several days in a row, once by one of those megapods that were becoming more frequent encounters in the Med those days.

The late bora and meltem boosted the final part of the passage that had by that time become exhausting. With the wind on her beam she sailed the final leg with F-8kts. She could smell the sage and the thyme.

She spent a few hours in غزة in Palestine, hoping to meet Mina. She didn't come.

The autopilot drive that connected to the radar failed by day 37 so for the last two days she exclusively hand-steered. She was sore, but calm, the type of calm one is when they are too exhausted to react otherwise. The calm one is when they can see the finishing line.

بينيلوبي would finally get to come home to herself before she joined us arriving in the home we had made for her in anticipation of her arrival.

Handritten on paper bi anonim, Σtim after 2050 as records for بينيلوبي arrival 2 hav taken plas in Mai-Jun 2050.

Announcement

Closure of “Panepistimio” - Botanical, Veterinary, & Human Medicine Higher Education Institute

With sadness and anger we inform you that our institute □ □ □□ cease its operation in March 2182 (March 28th will be the last day of teaching for those enroled before September 1st 2176 and finishing their degres). After 174 years of research, teaching, and development in the fields of botanical, veterinary, and human medicine and their intersections we are forced to  □goodbye. Visionary people have taught and studied here. Their work has improved al our lives and will continue to do so. The □□□□□ global situation makes it more imperative/critical than ever to foster fre and acesible to al learning and teaching environments that wil help us out of the crisis.
Yet the deterioration of such institutions and the lack □□ resources has hindered our teaching and research work. It is incredible our staff, students, and faculty kept going for as long they did. he lack of lodgings, fod, and clean water has made our laboratories and our student housing and restaurants dificult to operate but we could □□ work in some capacities mostly in the third space. The deterioration of the net connections that have been taking place the past 11 months and the defunding of al knowledge institutions in the region make it imposible to function at any capacity. We thank you for your trust in what we produced over these 174 years, we hope we have made your lives a litle bit better and more connected to the world around you. We thank everyone who has worked here non-human and human; the repairers, the educators, the cleaners, the nurses, the artists, □caretakers,

Acknowledgements

I would like to thank the many friends and acquaintances who helped me with translations; Zori, Ruthia Jenrbekova, Anuar Duisenbinov, Agnes Mercedes Kloft, Yousif Al-Tamimi, Rewsen Rojistanî, Rojda Tugrul, Giul Andrighetto, m, Tegiye Birey, Noël Iglassias (ኖኬል ኪ ግልሲያስ), and Bilal Alame, thank you so much.

Thank you to Giorghis Despotakis and Iain Zabolotny for your feedback and time, Katharina Wiedlack for being in conversation with me, and Sólveig Guðmundsdóttir for the tech support. Thank you to everyone who hired me or gave me leads to paying jobs during this time.

Thank you to the two reviewers for their feedback, comments, and thoughts. Reviewer A, you brought tears to my eyes. I felt seen and deeply understood. Reviewer B, I thank you for your time and thoughts. As is customary, your opinion veered 180° from reviewer A's. Your feedback prompted me to write a preface-turned-medface and lay out what kind of book this is.

A big thank you goes to all those authors whose work inspired me and guided me during this journey. Thank you to Chiki for just being himself and to my friends at V. whom I love very much despite not seeing lately.

Thank you to Anna Carastathis for her support and friendship and for giving me the opportunity to play on such a format in a series titled “Feminist Praxis”; you walk the walk and I’m grateful to have connected with you. Thank you to Vivi Papanikola for her support with type setting and laying the book out.

Agapi mou thank you for your feedback and support <3

I also want to thank this book for this book. Καλοτάξιδο να είσαι και σ'ευχαριστώ για τις περιπέτειες και τη συντροφιά, έμαθα πολλά μαζί σου.
